Wheat has paid me well

All my life I'd been told that I couldn't grow wheat on my land. They said that wheat couldn't be grown in this country at all.

But I've proved they were wrong.

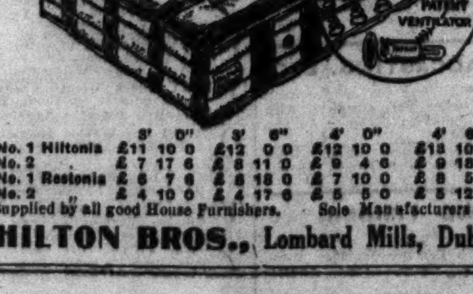

Last year for the first time I put in wheat, and it did splendidly. I found it no more difficult to handle than oats or barley. The yield was good—much better than I'd expected, and it paid me well. From now on I'm going all out for wheat. I know I can grow it. I am sure I can sell it, for the Government guarantees me a market. And I'm sure of my price, for the Government guarantees that too.

Guaranteed MINIMUM PRICES
For wheat sold during Sept., Oct., Nov., and Dec.,
per barrel.
For wheat sold after January 1st,
per barrel.
These prices are for wheat bushling 60 lbs. For wheat of a higher or lower bushel weight the price will vary 3d. per lb. up or down, as the case may be.

Grow WHEAT
and make it pay you too!

GREEN FOOD.

Writing on this subject in the Weekly Irish Times, the Poultry Correspondent says:—

Green food is absolutely essential for laying hens. If cabbage or other green vegetables are not available, mangels, turnips, sprouted oats, or damaged beet may be substituted. When feeding greens it is best to suspend them in a wire basket, so that the birds can have exercise in reaching them. The basket can be suspended from the inside roof, reaching to about two feet from the floor. A moderate, but regular, supply of animal or flesh food is also necessary. Cooked meat, such as offals, may be used instead of fish or meat meal. When thoroughly cooked the offals should be finely pounded and mixed in the proportion of one part meats to eight or nine parts meals. In addition to the above, all layers must have adequate supplies of sharp grit and oyster shell, or old lime mortar, as an aid to digestion, and to assist in the formation of shell, and clean, fresh water must always be obtainable. A lump of sulphate of iron placed in the drinking water is very useful as a tonic and disinfectatnt.

ROSES.

Writing on this subject in the Weekly Irish Times, the Garden Correspondent says:—

Now that we are within measurable distance of the planting season, we think a few remarks on the planting of the rambler, or semi-wild section of the rose family, may be considered opportune, in view of the recommendation given by some authorities that existing trees and shrubs should be used as supports for the plants. We are ready to admit that a large specimen of one of the climbing or rambler roses, running riot over a tree or evergreen shrub, is a delightful object when in bloom, but we have to consider whether the brief enjoyments the picture presents is full compensation for the injury done to the tree or shrub by which it is supported. We have seen so much injury done to fine trees and shrubs by allowing climbers to ramble through their branches that we have no hesitation in describing the practice as one to be avoided. Pergolas, arches and bowers are now becoming a necessity in every well-ordered garden, and over these our climbing friends can ramble without restraint and spread their long trailing wreaths of flowers on every side.

10,373 HOUSES BUILT BY PRIVATE FIRMS AND PUBLIC UTILITY SOCIETIES

TEN THOUSAND three hundred and seventy-three new houses were completed in the Free State by private builders and public utility societies under the Housing (Financial and Miscellaneous Provisions) Act, 1932-34, up to 31st July, 1935.

This total compares with 13,868 built by local authorities in the same period, and demonstrates the great activity of the private builders.

Local authorities continue their campaign of house-building, and now it is reported that—

(1) Limerick City Commissioner proposes to build 1,450 in all, including 600 flats;
(2) Kildare County Board of Health has decided on the erection of 600 cottages;
(3) South Cork Board of Health are to borrow £48,000 to enable them to build 206 cottages;
(4) Kilkenny Corporation proposes to float a loan to enable them to build 170 cottages;
(5) Drogheda Corporation has discussed building houses to rent at 2/6 a week.

On Monday next Donegal County Board of Health will consider tenders for building 99 cottages, and on Tuesday Cork Corporation will receive tenders for 106 houses.

On 1st October Kilkenny County Board of Health will consider tenders for building 341 cottages in eight districts.

Tipperary (S.R.) County Board of Health will, on 24th September, consider tenders for the erection of 187 cottages.

600 FOR CO. KILDARE

At the meeting of the Kildare Board of Health Miss Darby proposed: That a further scheme be formulated for 600 cottages to be erected in the county, including at least one-half of those shown by the Housing Survey to be required in the smaller towns and that a special meeting of the Board be held in due course to allocate those cottages to the various areas in the county, and to make necessary arrangements for going forward immediately for the carrying out of the scheme.

The Secretary said they had been building cottages at the rate of 250 a year, and that was not bad.

Miss Darby said she was not satisfied with the rate of progress in the Board's building schemes. She did not see what was to prevent contracts being taken for the remainder of the 300 houses in the current scheme, and have all completed within six months.

The resolution was adopted.

170 FOR KILKENNY

At a meeting of Kilkenny Corporation the Town Clerk suggested that they apply to the Local Government Department to sanction the getting of a loan from the bank of £5,000 to meet payments to the contractor pending the floating of a loan for the whole scheme of 170 houses. Instead of floating a loan for 80 houses, it would save expense to wait until they were in a position to float one loan for the whole scheme. A resolution that they apply for permission to get a loan of £5,000 from the bank, as suggested by the Town Clerk, was passed unanimously.

206 FOR SOUTH CORK

South Cork Board of Health received a letter from the Local Government Board sanctioning a loan of £48,000 in connection with the erection of 206 cottages in the South Cork area, and it was decided to advertise for tenders for 54 to be erected in the Macroom area.

100 FOR PORTLAOIGHISE

At the meeting of Portlaoighise Town Commissioners, Mr. J. W. McEvoy referred to his proposal, passed some months ago, to formulate two housing schemes, in addition to the clearance scheme—one for 50 houses of the Artisan Dwelling Class and another for 50 better-class houses—and asked if any steps had been taken in the matter. After discussion it was agreed to again advertise for sites.

500 FOR GALWAY

Mr. Patrick J. Moran held an inquiry at the Town Hall, Galway, to determine the purchase money or compensation to be paid for the lands to be acquired for the purposes of the Shantalla Area Compulsory Purchase Order. Prices ranging in the main between £500 and £700 per acre were demanded for land in the area. The Urban Council proposed to acquire 90 acres of land for building of 500 houses.

1,450 FOR LIMERICK

Mr. James P. Geraghty, City Manager of Limerick, in a statement regarding his housing plans, said that it was his ambition to built out of hand 1,450 dwellings, of which number 600 would be flats.

The following are the proposed groups of houses and their respective sites:—Old Distillery site, 100 houses; Killealy (Thomondgate), 250 houses; Killalee (Singland), 250 houses; Carey's road, 600 flats; Clare street district, 50 houses; Janesborough district, 150 houses; Island Field, 50 houses.

The Carey's road allocation of 600 flats is a slum clearance scheme. There are fields at the rear of the existing houses, and it is expected to commence the building of some of the flats here very shortly. When these are completed the people will be moved from the houses into the flats. The houses will then be demolished and more flats erected on their sites. This means that people from other areas can also be provided with flats in the Carey's road area.

Mr. Geraghty added that he had now on hands seven schemes altogether. His great difficulty was to secure the building sites, but good progress had been made in that direction.

NEW HOUSING SCHEMES AT DROGHEDA

The Housing Committee reported to the Drogheda Corporation that they submitted plans, etc., for the erection of six four-roomed houses at Upper North road to the Local Government Department. The Department had approved the plans and specification. It is our intention, continued the report, to clear all the old insanitary houses on North road and George's street, and, by replacing them with new houses, remove the dilapidated appearance which our town has presented on one of its main thoroughfares. We have also under consideration a scheme for the erection of three-roomed houses at Scarlet street and Oulster lane. It is proposed to erect these houses on property in Oulster lane to be acquired from Captain Smyth, and on your property at Scarlet street, adjoining St. Patrick's School. The Borough Surveyor is preparing plans for this scheme. The various housing schemes in hands are progressing satisfactorily.

Alderman Kierans congratulated the Housing Committee on the last paragraph of the report and their efforts to provide houses for the people of the town. They had recently put up property in the Dublin road for building schemes, and the number of applications received was ample evidence for everyone that there is a demand for the better-type house in Drogheda.

The Mayor (Alderman L. T. Walsh) said that the only way to improve the entrances to the town was by doing it piecemeal. They would be considering tenders for new houses at the North road entrance to the town, and he asked the members to keep in mind the fact that these houses were being built for tenants further down the North road who would be moved into the new houses in order that the Council could get rid of the old eyesores of this entrance to Drogheda. If people will have a little patience the housing problem after six months' time should not be as acute as it is to-day, and while it would not, of course, be solved, the pinch would be got over within the next two years, and he hoped that before the Council's term of office has come to an end they would at least have done justice to the people.

The Mayor, continuing, said that as regards the cheaper houses there was a delay which was not the fault of the Council. In order to build houses which could be let at the very low rent of 2s 6d a week the Council must have a good deal of its own property to build on or must be able to acquire property at a very low rate. There might be a slight leaning on the rates in order to provide houses at such low rent but he for one was prepared to back it because it was neither Christian nor human to ask people to live under such housing conditions as exist in some parts of the town at present.

Limavady Urban Council has received approval of a scheme for the erection of 30 houses.

LIBRARIES AND LANGUAGE REVIVAL

PAPER AT CELTIC CONGRESS

REALISM IN IRISH LIFE

THE IDEALISTIC NOVEL

MISS ROISIN WALSH, Chief Librarian, City of Dublin Public Libraries, read a paper at the Celtic Congress in Cardiff to-day on "The Place of Libraries in the Revival of the Language."

Miss Walsh stated that the libraries had been known for a long time in Ireland, but only as collections of books for scholars. Irish librarians liked to trace their professional ancestry back to the sixth century, when several collections are known to have existed, notably that of St. Colmcille. The first direct reference to a librarian is in the Annals of the Four Masters, where the death of the librarian of the Great Armagh Library is mentioned under the year 1136. As keepers of books librarians had at all times played an important part in the preservation of the language. It was due to the reverence and care with which Irish manuscripts had been preserved that such a wealth of them survived the turmoil and chaos of centuries. That so many of them still remained on into modern times was one of the anomalies of Irish library history.

An example of that was Trinity College Library, the oldest Irish library, which was founded by English soldiers in 1601. The first great accession of books to Trinity College after its formation was the library of Archbishop Ussher, which contained the Book of Kells. This set a sort of standard for Trinity which began early to collect manuscripts, both Latin and Irish. Thus, the great Anglicising institution was at the same time a builder of Anglo-Irish civilisation and the preserver of what those she represented were trying to kill in Irish civilisation. While Gaelic Ireland was in the throes of famine and disease, and flocking to emigrant ships, a small band of gallant scholars kept alive the idea of Irish civilisation.

In the actual revival of the language the older libraries were the workshops of the 19th century craftsman, and scholar after scholar carried on the work until, in the 20th century, a whole people was caught up in the movement that had made Irish Ireland the dynamic cultural and political force it was to-day.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

In Ireland the public library had been an instrument of regeneration for the people. Their chief value had been that by collecting and making available books of Irish interest; they had given Irish people a new picture of themselves as a noble people, with an individuality of their own and not inferior to other people because they were different from them. The rehabilitation of the people in their own minds was the great task of the libraries. Ten years ago, after two wars, especially as a result of the demoralisation of the civil war, the people were despondent and bitter. In five years, through intensified library work, she had seen a change in the whole outlook of the county. That it had not been done in the Irish language was not the fault of the movement or the people, but the circumstances. It was full of vitality. It was the Irish language and what it represented, that was the unifying influence in the country.

The vitality and freshness of Irish literature in English was drawn from the language. The young writers of to-day spoke Irish first or came from the Breac Gaeltacht. While the last generation of writers were the Russells, Yeatses, Synges, the new generation were the O'Flahertys, O'Donovans, O'Donnells, and O'Higginses. The public libraries had taken no part officially in the language revival, nor in the national movement. In the first place, they were under the control of the Department of Local Government and Public Health, which was not concerned in education, officially or unofficially. This arrangement had advantages, for it allowed an amount of freedom that would be impossible under the Department of Education.

AN IRISH IRELAND

Proceeding, Miss Walsh said that the founding, in 1893, of the Gaelic League was the great opportunity for the libraries. They began collecting books and pamphlets.

Having referred to the work of various societies formed for the preservation of the Irish language and literature, and the valuable work done by libraries in collecting the results of their labours, she said that, apart from helping students, the tradition in the Irish libraries had always been an Irish Ireland one. The need of the Irish language was more Irish books, available for all in the free atmosphere of the library, and for more original work in Irish. Just as in English, the library was the unofficial continuation schools for thousands of young people, if Irish was to be saved the libraries would have to carry on the work done by the schools, which were already turning out children able to read and enjoy books in Irish. The libraries were willing and anxious to help, but the output of books in Irish was not equal to the demand.

The libraries main interest was in the new Irish literature which was being created, and particularly in the lighter side of it—novels, essays, drama. These were the most popular books, and it was only through popular books that the language would spread. Scholars could not help much when it was a question of getting the language spoken in the home, on the street and on the farms. Many of the present generation of novelists in Ireland were native Irish speakers, but their books were in English, because they must live by selling in the best market. That, unfortunately, was not the Irish market. The most vital novelists in Ireland to-day were from Irish-speaking districts, and Irish was the first language of their childhood. Among these were Liam O'Flaherty, Frank O'Connor, Peadar O'Donnell, Tom O'Flaherty.

THE GREAT ADVENTURE

Students of the Irish language movement knew that there was a lack of technical terms in Irish for modern methods and procedure that was, she said, a question which had been engaging the attention of the Library Association of Ireland.

Concluding, Miss Walsh said that a heroic battle had been waged against overpowering odds. As things were now, she did not think Irish would ever become, as it was before, the daily language of the people. But it was a great adventure. The discovery of the language must be for thousands, as it was for her, the door to the finest experience of her life—an understanding of the Gael and his Gaelic.

REALISM IN IRISH LIFE

During the discussion following Miss Walsh's paper, Professor O Maille deplored that in Irish libraries there were "too many novels written in the realist Russian style." He said that they had too much realism in Irish life already, and anyone who was acquainted with it and had to be in the midst of it all day did not want to read about it at night. Ireland wanted more of the idealistic novels.

He referred also to the risks of fire and war to precious old Irish manuscripts. He said that big fires in Dublin or London might destroy manuscripts of priceless importance to culture. He suggested that the Governments should take some steps to secure, if not at once, then gradually, the making of photographic facsimiles of these manuscripts.

He said that a country which produced such writers of English as Shaw and Yeats should also be able to produce a writer in Irish of equal brilliance. As to the need of modern words, a committee, of which he was a member, had in recent years made between eight and ten thousand words available for general use.

Professor Agnes O'Farrelly spoke of the tendency to deprecate the cultural achievements of the nineteenth century. She said that in Ireland in that century their material prosperity had been reduced below the point at which literary greatness was possible. The amazing thing was the power of recuperation of the Celtic peoples.

The chairman at the session, the Rev. J. MacKechnie, said that an international working arrangement between all Celtic countries would assist librarians considerably, if only to facilitate the exchange of catalogues.

Miss Walsh was accorded a warm vote of thanks for her paper.

LANGUAGE MATTERS

SUGGESTIONS AT GROUP MEETINGS

This morning also the Congress debated in two groups upon the language matters. The Welsh, Breton and Cornish formed one group; Irish, Scottish and Manx another.

Mr. Hector MacDougall, in Scots Gaelic, said that Irishmen should be induced to compete at the Scottish Mod annual festival and Scots people at Irish festivals. Approved new Gaelic words and technical terms should be adopted by both Ireland and Scotland, so that the language movement would develop in the same direction in both countries.

Professor O'Maille, in Irish, said that a good way to increase friendship between Irish and Scots language revivalists would be to exchange native-speaking students, who could quickly master the dialects of both countries. The syntax of both languages was the same, but the pronunciations were different.

Mr. D. Owen, speaking in Welsh of the revival of Welsh drama for the benefit of the language, said that unfortunately the number of new dramatists was small. The movement itself was alive, but there were certain things killing it. In this connection, Welsh people are, perhaps, the most hopeless God has ever created, he concluded.

WELSH LANGUAGE AND MUSIC

This evening Miss Jennie Williams lectured upon "The Relation of Language and Music in Wales."

Speaking upon church music, she said that she did not want to banish the organ, but she wanted to change its position. Unaccompanied singing was the highest form. Huge organs in churches were tending to produce a nation of shouters instead of singers. Music nowadays was a necessity; it was the only way of combating materialism that was affecting them everywhere.

PROTESTANT ORPHAN SOCIETY

At the monthly meeting of the Committee of the Protestant Orphan Society there were present:—The Rev. W. N. Harvey (in the chair), the Rev. W. Bell, the Rev. F. E. Byrn, the Rev. R. H. Dowse, the Rev. C. C. W. Duggan, the Rev. A. W. F. Orr, the Rev. J. Tobias, and Messrs. J. Robinson, A. Robinson and J. Wheatley.

Seven orphans, belonging to three different families, were taken on to the roll of the Society. Payment for prizes in connection with the Joly Scripture examination was sanctioned. Special grants for nourishment were made in two cases. Outfit grants were made in the cases of two orphans who have obtained employment.

The following letter from the mother of five orphans now cut in the world was noted with appreciation:—"May I take this opportunity of expressing my deep gratitude to the Society for the protection it afforded my children? As I look back over the years I realise how indebted we are to the kindly and unfailing help which enabled us to pull through very hard and bitter times."

BELATED SELLING UPSETS STOCKS

From Reuter's Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Friday.

Late sales on the Stock Exchange to-day adversely affected a previous upward endeavour, and the list ended with a rather mixed appearance. Sales totalled 1,730,000 shares.

The general list improved with the strength of Mining shares—in which U.S. Smelting jumped 8 points—reviving some bullish spirit. Copper issues responded to the firmness of the commodity, while some Rails were bought.

Renewed selling, notably of Rails, constituted an unsettling influence in the final dealings, and the close was irregular.

The Mining section rose anything to $2. U.S. Smelting, exceptionally, finishing $7 higher.

Call money remained at ¾ per cent., and the outside rate was unchanged at ¼ per cent. Prime paper was quoted at ¾ to 1 per cent. Open market discount rates were unaltered.

Sterling exchange opened ⅛c. up at 4.93⅞, and remained at this level during the morning. The rate rose to 4.94¼ in the afternoon, and finally closed ⅞c. higher, compared with the previous close at 4.94⅜.

Silver was unchanged at 65⅜.

IRISHMAN'S NEW HARVESTER

HEADING AND BAGGING WHEAT

From Our Agricultural Correspondent.

An improved harvester, which may be described as the Bergin header and bagger, was seen at work on the farm of Mr. J. J. Bergin, at Maybrook, Athy, Co. Kildare, yesterday. This invention of Mr. Bergin's, built on his own farm, is designed to cut off the ears of corn with the minimum amount of straw attached, to bag the ears as the machine proceeds, and later thresh the corn from the bags. It is intended that the straw left standing shall be ploughed into the ground to provide the necessary humus where enough cattle cannot be kept to supply farmyard manure. The use of artificial fertilisers, in conjunction with the ploughed-in straw, would, it is claimed, provide the next crop with the necessary plant food.

There are operating in the United States and Great Britain a number of combine-harvesters, very expensive machines, which reap and thresh the grain at the same time, but in connection with which a costly drier has to be used. In Australia, Mr. Bergin stated yesterday, there is a machine that heads the corn, but, so far as he is aware, his own is the first attempt that has been made to produce a header and bagger.

Mr. Bergin retains the principle of the old mower, so far as the cutting is concerned. He does not think it can be improved upon, but he has knives raised to whatever height is necessary to cut the straw within two or three inches of the heads of grain.

Yesterday's demonstration was made on portion of a well-matured and well-saved wheat crop, and it satisfied a number of critical farmers and agricultural engineers.

ECONOMIC ASPECT

With the increasing area under wheat, Mr. Bergin thinks that there soon will be more wheaten straw than farmers can use with the present number of cattle in the country. Economic conditions being what they are, he does not think that farmers are likely to breed or feed more cattle, even for the purpose of obtaining farmyard manure. He, therefore, set about providing a solution, and it has taken the form of this machine.

By the use of this machine, he claims that the keeping of extra cattle will become unnecessary. Some of the food taken from the soil will be returned in the ploughed-in straw, with the addition of artificial manures. Additional stall feeding, and the expense attaching to it, will thus become unnecessary. A saving also will be effected by reason of the fact that it will not be necessary to stook or stock the corn. The bags containing the heads will be stored in a safe place until they are required for threshing.

Some days ago this machine was examined with interest by Dr. Ryan, Minister for Agriculture; Mr. Frank Aiken, Minister for Defence; Mr. D. Twomey, Secretary, Department of Agriculture; and Mr. J. M. Adams, Department of Agriculture.

NATIONAL WHEAT CAMPAIGN

TO BENEFIT THE FARMER

A notice elsewhere in our columns reminds farmers of the advantages of joining the national campaign for the growing of more wheat in the Free State. The campaign aims at making the country self-sufficing in the matter of the supply of the people's staple food-stuff, and at keeping at home for distribution among wheat-growers the immense sums of money still being spent on the purchase of wheat from farmers in other countries, who buy little or nothing from us in return. The farmers are guaranteed a return for their labour far above that secured by farmers in other countries from which at present we draw our main supplies of wheat. The Government guarantees a minimum price which is much higher than the world's price, and also an assured market—a market that cannot be glutted, and in which prices cannot be depressed by over-supply. The present season's experience should dispel the prejudice against wheat-growing. A crop of 170,000 acres is being harvested in excellent condition, and keen competition has been displayed by millers to secure supplies. In many cases advertisements have appeared offering free sacks and free carriage as inducements to farmers to sell their wheat to particular millers. As a result of this year's harvest, £1,500,000 will be distributed among growers.

CIVIC GUARDS AT FOOTBALL MATCHES

CORK, Friday.

At Cork District Court to-day the Minister for Justice sought a decree for £22 10s. from the Cork Football Club, Ltd., 32-34 Princes street. Superintendent McNeill gave evidence that the money was due for the services of Gardai at Association football matches in Cork. The club made written application for the Gardai, whom they obtained at a flat rate of 10s. for four hours per man. The sum was not disputed.

Mr. O'Connor, State solicitor, said that he had received an offer from the club of £2 a match, but, as he had not instructions to accept it, he applied for the decree, which was granted.

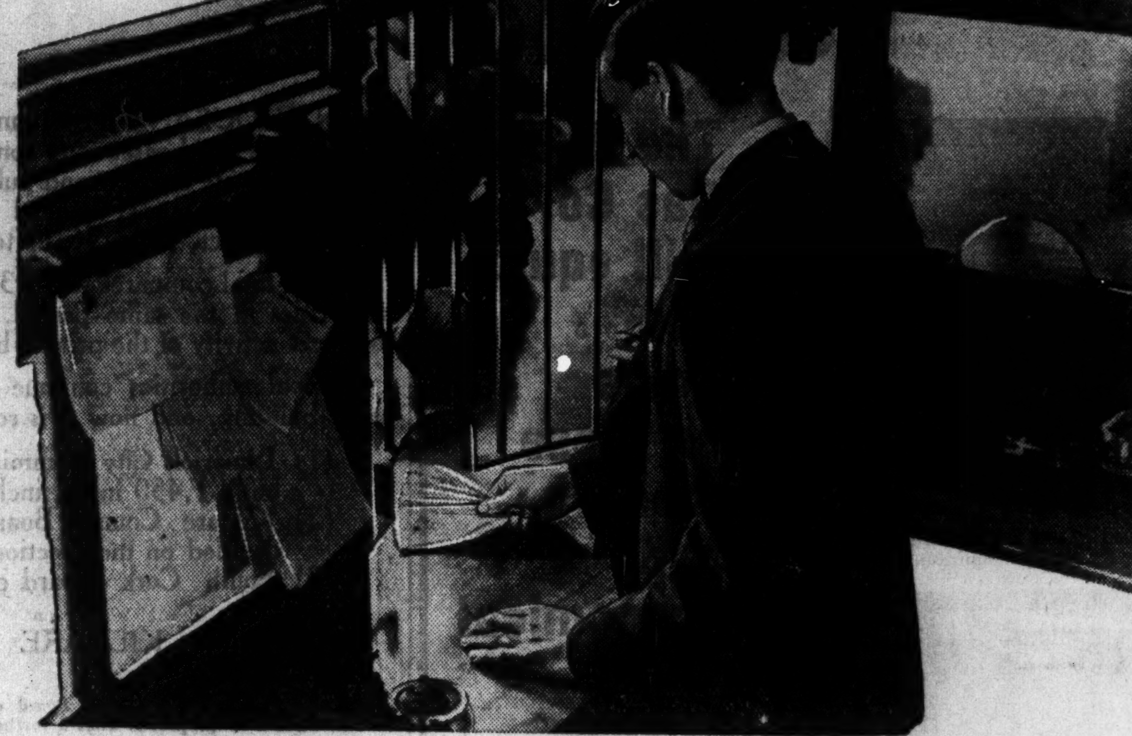

CLARA DISPUTE SETTLED

A conference was held at Clara yesterday between representatives of Messrs. Goodbody, Ltd., and the Irish Transport and General Workers' Union with reference to the strike of workers in the jute factory of the firm, which commenced on August 21st last. Subsequently proposed terms for a settlement were submitted to a meeting of the workers, and on a ballot vote they were accepted by a majority. Work will be resumed immediately.

A three hours' anti-monarchical general strike took place at Crete in connection with a memorial Service for the victims of the August riots, in which several workers were killed and many injured.

COAL UTILISATION COMMITTEE

An inaugural meeting of the Coal Utilisation Committee for the Irish Free State was held in Dublin on Thursday. This body, which has for its main object the furtherance of the sale of coal, has been set up under the ægis of the Irish coal importers and anthracite collieries, as well as other producers and shippers of coal.

The Committee proposes to utilise Press advertisements, literature for merchants to distribute, and by means of demonstrations to show the Irish public that solid fuel, burnt in the modern way, is the cheapest, healthiest and most comfortable of fuels.

There is also available a service of engineers to advise consumers on industrial and central heating problems, and enable them to get the best results from their fuel.

The Chairman of the newly-formed organisation is Mr. V. A. Carroll, of Dublin; the Vice-Chairman is Mr. J. E. Nolan, of Waterford.

All inquiries should be addressed to Mr. C. Stewart Barrett, F.C.A., c/o Kevans and Son, 1 and 2, Westmoreland street, Dublin.

MESSRS. L. JORDAN'S NEW FACTORY

PROGRESS OF BRAID PRODUCTS

ENNIS Braid Mills, which have been in production since February last, are announced as being "officially" open from to-day. At present there are over seventy hands—mostly girls, and all local—employed.

The mills were built by Messrs. P. C. McMahon, contractors, Ennis, for the firm of Messrs. L. Jordan and Company, Ltd., of Leicester, England, who had previously registered in the Free State a company, of which the directors are Messrs. W. Chapman (managing director), S. McCrum and L. Devlin, of Dublin. The operatives work under ideal conditions, in an atmosphere perfectly lighted and ventilated. The building is of concrete and masonry, and is roofed with asbestos cement corrugated sheets, supported on a steel framework. By the use of patent glazing maximum daylight is assured. Current from the Shannon scheme provides electric light and motive power for the various machines. Ventilation is on the latest modern lines, with central heating for the winter period and electric fans for the summer. There are separate cloakrooms and wash-rooms for both sexes. The total floor space is between 25,000 and 26,000 square feet, all of which is finished with three-quarter-inch granite mastic asphalt to prevent dust.

WORK BEGUN

Actual operations in the mills commenced on 12th February last with the manufacture of boot and shoe laces, elastic braids and loom webs, and cork insoles. At first experienced workers from Leicester and Belgium were engaged to teach the Irish employés, but in a short time the skilled operatives were enabled to return to their homes, as, in the words of the managing director, the Irish learners had proved themselves "alert, willing and capable, and very quickly assimilated the instruction imparted." All raw material is "picked" and inspected before being sent to the first department for "sizing and finishing." Then it goes to the "reeling and measuring" machines, after which it is cut, tagged, counted, banded and boarded, etc. Each operation is followed by inspection to ensure manufacture of the ideal articles at which the company aims. Various colours in elastics are dyed or tinted in a special machine, but as yet no regular dye-house has been erected. Dyeing, polishing and mercerising of cotton yarns and silks will become essential in the near future. In addition, braiding machinery and looms, together with doubling frames, winding machines, and warping machines are to be installed in the mills until eventually the whole concern will be self-maintained. Cork insoles are at present manufactured throughout at Ennis.

FIVE-YEAR PLAN

Discussing extension of the activities of the mills and future employment, Mr. Chapman, managing director, said, in an interview, that he was working on a five years' development plan. He hoped to have at least 100 persons employed at the end of the first year's operations, and 250 at the end of five years. With the installation of the additional machinery webs of all descriptions for the furniture trades, the Army, horse traffic, motor bodies, etc., would be manufactured at Ennis. From this point the mills would progress to the manufacture of embroidery, torchon laces, and fringes for various purposes, such as lamp shades, mantle covers and the like. There would also be produced twisted cords and gimps and at the end of five years he hoped the mills would be also engaged in the manufacture of electric cable flex, surgical webbings and muslin cloth.

INCREASED OUTPUT

Mr. Chapman mentioned that the output of the factory had steadily increased from the beginning until it was now capable of supplying all the needs of the Free State with every article at present being manufactured in the mills. In seven months the staff had increased from seven to seventy. A ready market had been found in this country for the products of the mills, and the promise given to the Minister for Industry and Commerce, who, when issuing a licence to manufacture, asked that the articles produced in Ennis would not be inferior in quality to the imported variety and would not cost the purchasing public anything more than they had paid heretofore, was being rigidly kept.

In this connection he desired to publicly acknowledge the co-operation extended by the Department of Industry and Commerce. The Department's keen interest and practical co-operation, he said, had been one of the main contributory causes of the continued success of the mills. Mr. Chapman also acknowledged the assistance rendered by the members of the Ennis Chamber of Commerce, who were instrumental in raising a substantial sum of the capital required for the enterprise, and by Mr. P. J. Meghen, B.E., B.Sc., who, when Commissioner administering the civic affairs of the town, had granted a free site for the mills.

The architects responsible were Messrs. Winters and Jones, engineers, architects and surveyors, of 27 Molesworth street, Dublin.

The massive steel fabrication was carried out by Messrs. Graves, of Waterford, and same was covered with a corrugated asbestos roof, well lighted and ventilated. The electrical work, which includes modern factory lighting and the wiring of the machines, which are all electrically controlled, was carried out by Messrs. Bective Electrical Company.

Almost 5,000 sheep were catalogued, and entries were received from the leading flocks throughout the country. A good selling trade prevailed throughout for all classes at prices showing an advance from the previous sales, and a complete clearance was made. The dispersal of Captain R. The following were the principal buyers:—The Right Hon. Lord Dunleath, Senator Garahan, Mrs. Bland, Dr. Lennon, T. E. Gloster, Dr. C. S. Pardon, Miss Montgomery, the Misses Tottenham, Captain H. A. Bruen, Mrs. Woodward, Messrs. Charles Creaser, Walter Gernon, R. A. Synge, S. W. McKeever, S. A. McKeever, Richard Dreaper, J. E. Terrace Garden Planning

These clear September days, after nights of heavy dew, are ideal for the autumn tidying of terrace gardens, and it is really quite interesting to compare one's own and one's neighbour's preparations for next year's display. Personally I favour borders filled with a mixed collection of herbaceous and rock plants, with a judicious sprinkling of bulbs and bedding-out. But that only makes me admire all the more a friend's show of wallflowers and daffodils in spring, and stocks and snapdragons in summer. The work of trimming and tidying in my "patch" has reminded me of two excellent ideas I saw carried out in a Belfast terrace garden. At the "next door" side of the narrow, well-shaven lawn a strip of grass about a foot and a half wide had been left uncut to form a background for hundreds of daffodils. They were just over when I saw them, but must have been a joy to the owners and their neighbours; for there was only a light wood and wire fence between the gardens. Then the vegetable plot was divided from the flower garden by a low wall. This was only about four feet high, but very broad, and when I was there it was covered on top and down the sides with masses of rock plants. I complimented the owner on this original and picturesque way of dividing a garden, and he laughed. "It was my wife's idea. I just did the donkey-work of the building."

Autres Temps

The grassy patch at the side of a certain Dublin road is one of the tinkers' favourite haunts. The other morning a family was camping there. A lean horse nibbled at the grassy bank, and a decidedly ramshackle cart was tilted against the hedge. As for the tinker folk they were enjoying a hearty meal, seated round a crackling wood fire. But, in strange contrast to the primitive surroundings, I was amused to see beside them on the grass an old-fashioned gramophone with a big red horn. As I passed a small girl placed the needle in position, and immediately there issued forth from the capacious horn sounds that bore a very faint resemblance to music. Judging by the noise the needle had not been changed for at least six months, but the tinker family listened with every evidence of enjoyment to their improvised orchestra.

The House of Mulgrave

That popular quarter of Dun Laoghaire, Mulgrave terrace, derives its name from a famous family, one of whom was Lord Lieutenant about a century ago, and which owed its fame and affluence to an amazing adventure.

This adventure, as narrated by Whymper, runs as follows. It tells how one William Phipps, a humble person, and one of the early deep sea divers to boot, founded the noble house of Mulgrave. "He was the son of a blacksmith, and in 1663 devised a plan for recovering the treasures on board a Spanish ship which had sunk off the coasts of Hispaniola." Charles II. lent him a ship and all that he required; but the expedition was a failure, and Phipps sank into almost abject poverty.

But he was a man of great energy, and a little later managed to interest the Duke of Albemarle and others, who subscribed for a second attempt. In 1667 Phipps embarked on a vessel of 200 tons burthen, having undertaken to divide the profits between the shareholders who represented the associated capital in proportion to their subscriptions.

At first he was unsuccessful, but just as he was on the point of despair "found his gold mine." Phipps then returned to England with £200,000, of which the Duke received £90,000 and Phipps £20,000.

Naturally, he was knighted, and "prospered ever after." The member of the family who was Lord Lieutenant, apart from his merits as a good ruler, was considered the ugliest man in these islands. His only rival was Liston, the celebrated player. An intimate told the good-natured man one day that he was thought to be the "living image" of Liston. "Well, what of it?" was the amiable reply. "I don't mind." "Yes," said his friend, "that's all very well, but Liston is very much annoyed about it."

The "Triple Planet"

I saw a statement recently published (writes a correspondent) that the planet Saturn was losing his rings, though astronomers regarded with imperturbability this momentous change in the oldest of the major planets. Not with such unconcern did Galileo, who discovered these curious appendages in 1610, without, however, perceiving their real nature, view their disappearance a few years later. He had found Saturn to be tri-form, as he believed, and was deeply chagrined when the bodies, or ansae, on each side of the Saturnian globe disappeared, believing that he had been the victim of an illusion. Other observers, however, confirmed his discovery of the appendages, which looked like handles to the round globe, and which periodically disappeared in some mysterious way. It was reserved for Huygens to explain the enigma that had been a puzzle for nearly half a century, who guardedly announced in a Latin epigram that Saturn was girdled by a ring which did not touch the planet, and was inclined to the ecliptic. This announcement was received with a good deal of incredulity, but the Dutch astronomer predicted that the ring would disappear in December, 1671, when ring and doubts all disappeared, the plane of the ring being then presented edgeways towards the earth. This happens when the planet is on the northern border of Pisces, adjoining the constellation Aquarius (where he is at present), as also in the opposite part of his orbit in Leo.

The Composition of the Ring

Astronomers at first were inclined to regard the ring or rings (for powerful telescopes showed that there are three of them) as solid; later, owing to changes supposed to be taking place in them, they were believed to be fluid. A sensation was caused by O. Struve when he, in 1851, propounded a theory that the inner ring was approaching the planet at a rate that would bring it down on Saturn in a few centuries, but subsequent investigations failed to confirm this change. Clerk Maxwell some six years later showed that the ring, if solid or fluid, would be unstable, and that it must consist of a cloud of satellites revolving round the planet, and so close together as to be invisible individually. The stability and constitution of the Saturnian ring system was thus established.

The Dublin Fruit Market

A correspondent writes:—A gale from the sea sweeping round the Wicklow hills last week knocked so many apples in a friend's orchard that he had to market them all at once. For four days I helped him to pick and grade them, and then we started out early one morning with six bags of apples to make his fortune in the Dublin Market. I wonder how many Dublin people, even those who have spent their lives within walking distance of this interesting institution, realise how much worth while an early morning visit is.

Dublin looks strangely beautiful at seven o'clock on a September morning. Sun rises about six-thirty these mornings, and as we had a twenty-mile drive before us we were up and out before the sun drew colour from the grey fields. But before we had reached the city it was warming the old red brick of the sleeping houses. Not a sign of life except an odd cat sitting expectantly on a door-step and the postman on his first rounds.

The markets were as halls of death—cold, lofty and resounding. Votive offerings entered in slow procession, moving pyramids of dewy cabbage drawn by patient donkeys, piled barrels of fruit, a woman with a perambulator full of blackberries, recalling Three Rock and Rathfarnham; a lady holding in her hand a small bunch of coldly white chrysanthemums like a childish offering. Ford wagons, donkey-butts, creel-carts and Buicks, all took part in that slow-moving throng. And the variety of smells—all the tang of the land bottled under one roof. And from the fish market, the street, the salt of the sea!

Dublin Prices

Then the auctioneers began to howl like politicians while the producers stood round looking rather intimidated and anxious. My friend's apples were sold quickly and rather inconsequentially I thought; all our grading wasted; the small ones fetched as much as the large; the buyers did not even open the top of the bags. What we got scarcely paid for our breakfasts and our drinks at the early market bar. For myself, I regarded it all as a grand entertainment, and my friend, too, was well satisfied with the experience. One old farmer, however, was not too satisfied with his prices. He groaned as a glistening cone of cabbage rumbled by—"That's going now to some greengrocer at the other side of the city," he said, pathetically, "who'll sell it for tuppence a head. And my lettuce, sixpence a dozen, see what the greengrocer will charge for them. A fine life farming is nowadays!" And he went off muttering and disconsolate. Well, perhaps if one is to enjoy one's visit one had better be a shopkeeper rather than a producer.

CHILDREN'S TEA PARTY

The Killester branch of the Irish National Garden Guild are giving a tea party to all the children of the members, and are including the orphans in Killester garden village, to-day at 3 p.m. in the Boy Scouts Hall, Killester. The Artane Band will perform a programme of music during the afternoon.

James Sullivan, aged 15, of Lewis street, Cardiff, was killed yesterday when a horse drawing a Great Western Railway waggon bolted in Custom House street, Cardiff. For nearly half a mile in Custom House street and Adam street the horse dashed through the crowd, scattering people right and left, and many had narrow escapes before it was stopped.

IMPORT OF PERAMBULATORS

The Free State Executive Council yesterday made a Quota Order prohibiting the importation of perambulators except under licence. The preliminary period under the Order will commence on Saturday, September 14, and will end on October 20. Applications for licences to import during that period must be made on the prescribed forms.

The first quota period under the Order will commence on October 21 and on or after that date no person can be granted a licence to import perambulators unless he is registered in the Register of Importers set up under the Control of the Imports Act, 1934. The articles coming under the Order are: perambulators, chassis bodies and body shells of perambulators.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

THE DANCE HALL PROBLEM

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—Very wide powers, with accompanying grave responsibility, have been conferred on the District Justices by the recent Public Dance Halls Act. Indeed, it can be said with truth that in the mind of the general public the Justices have been constituted in practice and in fact, to a very considerable extent, the guardians of the morals of the youth of the nation, much though they may, on legal grounds, disclaim any such office or responsibility. During this present month the obligation rests on them of determining under what conditions public dancing shall be carried on in this country. No one expects them to be either spoil-sports or kill-joys, but everyone does expect that, having considered the informed public opinion of their administrative districts, they should set down what they consider the reasonable conditions for the legitimate amusement and recreation of the young people of that area. This several of them have done during the past week. Judging by their decisions, there has been a considerable divergence of opinion in dealing with what seems to be a very simple, commonplace and practical issue. Indeed, they do not stand alone in this. Nevertheless, they have broken the iniquitous tradition that was such a big factor in the demoralisation of our youth and have opened the way, let us hope, to a new era.

England, it will be readily granted, is not a land of spoil-sports or kill-joys. The Irish public may wish to contrast the closing hours fixed by English magistrates with those recently obtaining here or with those just determined by the District Justices. This can be done through a quotation from an article which I published in the Irish Ecclesiastical Record some time ago.

"Looking through the copies of licences, with official notes attached, I find that in Llandudno the latest hour to which extensions are granted is 'in very special cases up to 2 a.m., but generally 12 midnight.' In Birmingham 'extensions are seldom later than 2 a.m. The ordinary hour is 11.30 p.m.' In Oxford 'extensions are granted till 2 a.m. only.' In Middlesbro' the nominal closing hour is 10.30 p.m., and 'extensions are not granted beyond the hour of 2 a.m.—each application being dealt with on its own merits. In Douglas, Isle of Man, the ordinary hour is 11 p.m., and occasional licences are usually till 3 a.m. In Manchester the latest hour to which extensions are given is 1 a.m. In Margate the usual closing hour is 11 p.m.; as to extensions—'Bank holidays and other special occasions till 1 a.m., otherwise till 11.45 p.m.' In an article in a recent issue of the Sunday Times Sir John Fraser gives a graphic description of Blackpool, 'Britain's Coney Island.' He concludes the section on the 'ballrooms' thus: 'At half-past ten the band stops and everybody is expected to go home.' Extensions in this town (where puritans are unknown) are till 2 a.m."

Contrast all this with the undisciplined go-as-you-please dancing conditions of our Irish dance halls in town and country. Perhaps, the following quotation from one of a series of articles entitled "Abroad in Ireland," which the well-known English writer, John Gibbons, is at present contributing on his experiences of a trip to this country, will help to bring things home and to point the contrast. This sophisticated Londoner meets two musicians on the train to Ballyshannon as they were on their way to play at a dance:—

"How long would they have to play, I asked, and it might be four in the morning or it might be five; and I nearly fell off the train with shock. In my suburban London it's eleven at night that is closing time for a licensed dance hall, and in the gay and gilded West End I believe that it's midnight. Then I know that about half a dozen of the super hotels de luxe take turns for a very extra special licence till two in the morning, because they'll often advertise it as a great event, indeed, with extra special prices.

'And here in remotest Donegal, and on a branch line of a toy railway, two lads were getting off in the pitch darkness to walk to some village, and then play at a place that would dance till five in the morning."

What need of any comment, except to say that this is but typical of the whole country? How grateful we should be to have at last a great opportunity of pulling our country out of the social moral morass into which it has fallen. It is, surely, not too much to hope that every Irishman worthy of the name will make every effort to do so.

I should like to lay very special emphasis on the general practice obtaining in England, where extensions are given so extremely rarely that distinct application must be made for each individual extension, which is only granted on its special merits. This is readily seen in Mr. Gibbons's reference to the extensions to the big super-hotels in London. Could not we follow this precedent with great advantage to this country?—Yours, etc.,

"THE SILVER TASSIE"

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—My earliest recollection is hearing the late Father Bernard Vaughan, S.J., deliver a powerful sermon, in which he denounced and exposed the sins of society. He left no doubt in the minds of his listeners that Mayfair was morally corrupt. Over the past year not a week has passed without some priest or bishop denouncing the terrible evils of dance halls remaining open until the late hours of the morning. We are led to believe that the young men and women of our time have lost all respect for moral codes. There is not a Sunday passes on which some priest or minister in some church or chapel is not denouncing sin, and the sin is being committed by people in Ireland, as we are led to believe. The politicians denounce each other and what one party says of the other party, and, maybe, both of them correct, leads the outsider to believe that Ireland is a distressful country. Did Father Gaffney or the critics of Sean O'Casey make protest against blackening the character of the country and its people?

The bitter truth of the whole controversy raging round the production of "The Silver Tassie" by the Abbey Theatre is that Sean O'Casey shows to us what we refuse to see, and there are none so blind as those who will not see. Why preach contentment to those who are blind to the beauties of life because they see only ugliness? And if some attempt to clothe ugliness in the lives of the poor in the tinsel garments of make-belief, why object if somebody else, socially conscious, attempts to strip the ugliness of its false garments and show the people what their life is so that they might improve it?

The doctor operates on his client. He uses his surgical instruments, and tears out the offending growth. There will be some who will say he is cruel to draw forth blood, but the situation demands the operation, and all our sentiment will not avail in its stead. The same is true of the body politic. Sean O'Casey is merely showing us the hideous sores on the body politic. The surgeons of our morality cannot absolve themselves of their responsibility in the matter by attacking Sean O'Casey, nor will sticking-plasters help. The Rev. Father Gaffney can be better employed by arousing the people to a consciousness of their own position, and in so doing they will right the wrongs of the social system that finds in them the unhappy victims.

A word regarding Sean O'Casey. Sean O'Casey is a rather modest kind of person. He lives a retired life. He has known hunger and misery. And because he has known these things he has been a friend to many an unfortunate man or woman placed in a position he once occupied. If every Irishman and Irishwoman loved his people and his country as Sean O'Casey does, Ireland, indeed, would be a happy country to live in.—Yours, etc.,

JACK CARNEY.

52 Merrion square, Dublin,
September 13th, 1935.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—In to-day's issue of your paper the Rev. M. H. Gaffney, O.P., is reported as having said in an address to the Academy of Christian Art: "The Abbey directorate deserve commendation for taking off 'The Silver Tassie' at the end of the week following the first protest, despite the fact that the theatre had been booked out for its showing for three weeks."

Father Gaffney has been misinformed. In the past a successful new play has sometimes been continued for a second week, though never for a third week. Before the opening of the present season the directors of the Abbey Theatre decided to return to an earlier custom and never put on a play for more than a single week at its first production. In spite of the crowds that came to "The Silver Tassie," or applied for seats, the board did not consider even for a moment altering this decision.—Yours, etc.,

ERIC GORMAN, Secretary.

TURLOUGH O'CAROLAN

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—Everyone must rejoice that a movement has started in his home country by the Shannon to erect a monument to Turlough O'Carolan, the harper and poet, who died in 1738. May I suggest that the best tribute to greet Carolan's memory would be the re-interment in the consecrated soil of Kilronan of the dead man's head?

Carolan's head was dug up and stolen long ago, and was used with loathsome sacrilege. At last it got into the hands of decent people, but it was lodged in a museum instead of being returned to the grave. To retain the head in a museum would be nearly as ghoulish as to use it in an Orange Lodge—which is said to have been the relic's fate for a time. If we are not a nation of savages (whether ignorant or scientific), surely we will cease to perpetuate an outrage on poor Carolan's remains.

Let the head be buried again where once dead Carolan was laid with reverence. After that, but never before, let the monument be raised.—Yours, etc.,

ITALY AND ABYSSINIA

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—I would like you to publish the following letter, as it may put a different complexion on the Italo-Abyssinian dispute to that we have been hearing lately. While we deplore to hear of any country trying to annex another country, it is only fair to look on all sides of the question. England, who is making the most outcry against Italy, is really a main cause of the present threat of war.

I quote here an extract of a letter I recently received from a well-known priest and author, an Englishman, living in Italy for the last ten years, owing to his health having suffered through being gassed in the "Great War" when he was acting as chaplain to the British Forces.

"I am actually with Italy in this matter. When Italy entered the war England and France made an agreement with her that she should be given a colony in Africa, but when the war was over she got nothing, while England took the lion's share.

"All Italy got for the war were 660,000 dead and a proportionate number of cripples. Italy grows at the rate of 500,000 a year. Abyssinia will provido a home for ten million Italians, who are a hard-working people.

"Mussolini has no personal interest, only that of the people. He has done more in these years than has been done by all the Governments before put together, and he is single-minded, and has no interest in life but the welfare of the people. Italy is a wonderful example of what can be done for a country where you have a head who is quite selfless and lives every moment of his life for his country. Since he was left some money sufficient for himself and his family he has not taken a penny for his work as Prime Minister. A pity there are not more like him."

I have quoted the above to show that Mussolini is not the ambitious, unscrupulous person, or the Italian people the avaricious plunderers and robbers that is being represented to the public at the present time.

If England and France keep their promise even at this late date, war may be averted; and, surely, if they are sincere in their efforts for peace, this would be an easy way out.—Yours, etc.,

THE IRISH LANGUAGE

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—A report in English in to-day's Irish Times of certain remarks made in Irish at Colaiste Laighean quotes me as saying: "It was no use asking a sixteenth century language to suit the needs of the present day." I never said this.

I am also quoted as saying that "the burning question of to-day is: 'Are we desirous to give no place whatever to the English language in our affairs, or are we content to retain its use for the present?'" I stated precisely the opposite—namely, that the question of whether we desire to banish English from Ireland was of no immediate interest. The important thing was work for the Irish language.—Yours, etc.,

PARDON FOR MEMEL NAZI

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
KOVNO, Friday.

A pardon has been granted by the Lithuanian President to Herr Dammasch, one of the scores of Memel Nazis sentenced to imprisonment this year in connection with the alleged plot to seize Memel by force and hand it over to Germany.

Herr Dammasch, who was sentenced to six years' hard labour, had appealed to the President for clemency, together with two others—Herr Preikschat and Herr von Gehr, who received sentences of eight years and six years, respectively. It is reported that Preikschat and von Gehr will also be pardoned.

ON THE WIRELESS

TO-DAY

DUBLIN: Tom Madden and Company, 8.30.

NORTHERN IRELAND: B.B.C. Northern Ireland Male Voice Chorus, 9.40.

B.B.C. NATIONAL: Variety, 8.40.

REGIONAL: Promenade Concert, 8.

WEST: Celtic Concert, 7.

BRUSSELS No. 1: Operetta, "Veronique" (Messager), 8.

LEIPZIG: Programme of German Dances, 8.30.

THE Gresham Trio will broadcast for the second time this week, between the hours of 3.30 and 5.30, when their afternoon concert will be relayed by Dublin, Athlone and Cork. To-day their programme of music has been arranged for the most part in groups. There is one group of five dances, a second of four nocturnes, another of five traditional tunes, then three seasonal pieces, and yet another group consists of six song transcriptions. There is a change of vocalist, which brings Cecily Kenny into the programme singing Sir Hamilton Harty's "Grace for Light," Dr. Larchet's "A Stoirin Bain," and the "Song of Glen Dun," by Carl Hardebeck.

Elgar's Sonata for violin and piano will be performed at 7.20 by two very accomplished Dublin musicians—Eleanor Miley and Lorna Thompson. From the Dublin Studio at 8.30 Tom Madden will present a programme of his own compositions, when he will be assisted by Annie Fitzgerald, Mollie Madden, Michael O'Higgins, Robert McCullogh, the Radio Male Vocal Quartet and the Station Orchestra. At 10.30 H. C. Brown will give an eye-witness account of the Phœnix Park car race, which takes place this afternoon.

Peter Dawson and Maggie Teyte, who are the vocal soloists in the Promenade Concert to-night, make an already attractive programme even more so. The orchestral items include yet another performance of Delius's "On Hearing the First Cuckoo in Spring" and "Summer Night on the River," each of them perfect music pictures and the loveliest of the composer's shorter works. Isolde Menges will play the Violin Concerto No. 1 in G minor of Max Bruch.

Laelia Finneberg is broadcasting to-night with the B.B.C. Theatre Orchestra in the National programme at 10, Stanford Robinson conducting. Alfredo and his Gypsy Orchestra are to play for an hour on the same wavelength, commencing at 7.

In the usual B.B.C. Saturday night Variety programme (National, 8.40) Jeanne de Casalis will be heard in another "Mrs. Feather" episode. Mrs. Feather is a perfect name for the rather brainless creature created by Miss de Casalis, and made popular by her on the screen, as well as on the air. One loves her stupid remarks and inane observations, which, incidentally, are brilliantly humorous.

Another "Morecambe Night" will be heard on the North Regional wavelength at 8, when the microphone will visit the Palace Theatre to secure part of the programme of the "1935 Frolics" Concert Party; the Arcadian Pavilion, where the "Arcadian Follies" are entertaining, and then on to the Winter Gardens Ballroom for Lionel Millard and his Band. Midland Regional will also give this programme.

Leonard Henry, one of the first favourites among broadcasting comedians, is taking part in the portion of the Cabaret Show for relay to-night from the Heart o' Down Roadhouse, Ballynahinch, in the Northern Ireland programme at 10.40.

B.B.C. NATIONAL: B.B.C. Theatre Orchestra, with Derek Oldham (baritone), 9.30.

REGIONAL: The Boyd Neel String Orchestra, 9.20.

MILAN: Opera, "Samson and Delilah" (Saint-Saens), 8.50.

HILVERSUM: "Stabat Mater" (Pergolesi), 7.55.

AMONG the various Religious Services to be broadcast to-morrow two are of special importance. The new Archbishop of Westminster, Archbishop Hinsley, successor to Cardinal Bourne, will give the address in the Studio Service, which commences at 8 in the B.B.C. National programme.

On the occasion of the Diamond Jubilee Pilgrimage of the National Brotherhood movement a Service will be relayed from Carr's Lane Methodist Church, Birmingham, when the Rev. Canon H. R. L. Sheppard, C.H., D.D., will give the address. (Midland Regional, 8.)

One might expect an almost perfect Chamber Music recital from such musicians as the Grinke Trio, with Mary Jarred (contralto) as soloist. They will be heard at 5.30 in the National programme.

In the concert of the B.B.C. Theatre Orchestra it is not surprising to find that Derek Oldham, who is the vocalist, includes a number from "Lilac Time," the operetta embodying so much of Schubert's lovely music, in which Derek Oldham himself appeared in Dublin but a few weeks ago. He will sing "My Maid of the May," when he will be supported by the Orchestra and the B.B.C. Men's Chorus. The remainder of the programme includes songs from "Rose Marie" and "The Vagabond King," both by Friml, and the Huntsman's Chorus from Weber's "Der Freischutz." The orchestra, in music of the same character, will be conducted by Stanford Robinson.

A very fine concert, although only lasting for an hour, may be expected by the Birmingham Philharmonic String Orchestra, conducted by Johan Hock, and the Birmingham Ladies' String Orchestra, with Michael Mullinar as solo pianist. The programme consists of works by Schönberg, Scarlatti, Debussy and Elgar.

Other good programmes for broadcasting are announced by the Boyd Neel String Orchestra, with Leonard Gowings (tenor) as soloist, Boyd Neel conducting, and the New Light Orchestra, conducted by Ian Whyte, with Antony Baldwin as solo pianist. The latter will be found in the Scottish programme at 9.20.

Of lighter orchestras, all the performances are arranged for an earlier hour. Geraldo and his Gaucho Tango Oorchestra play at 5.30 (North Regional); Jan Berenska and his Orchestra will be heard at 5.30 from Leamington Spa in the Midland programme, while again at 5.30 Medvedeff's Balalaika Orchestra will broadcast on the Regional wavelength; listeners must, therefore, choose between them.

Talks in to-morrow's Dublin programme will be given at 8.30 by the Rev. L. P. Murray, E.I. - Diocesan Inspector of Schools, Armagh; Ard Ollamh, Rannefast Irish College, whose subject is "Ireland in the Days of Blessed Oliver Plunket." Then, at 9.15, Colonel Liam Archer will talk on "The Easter Dawn."

BOOKS OF THE WEEK

The Founding of the Abbey

W. G. Fay and a Great Achievement

The Fays of the Abbey Theatre. By W. G. Fay and Catherine Carswell. London: Rich and Cowan. 10s. 6d. net.

FEW people are better qualified than Mr. W. G. Fay to speak of the early stages in the Abbey's honourable, though stormy, history. He was one of the little group of men and women who, literally, made the theatre, and his own contribution was not less valuable nor less courageous than that of his fellows. If the playwrights supplied the ideas for the new dramatic movement, and Miss Horniman gave it a home, we can say also that Mr. W. G. Fay gave it the means of expression; for it was he who built up the company of players and founded the modern Irish tradition of acting. Without the work of the Fay brothers it is certain that the Irish dramatic revival would have had small chance of success—if, indeed, it had been able to exist at all.

It was at the memorable first performance of "The Countess Cathleen" that their paths crossed that of the literary side of the movement. The Fays, with an enthusiasm for acting which already had found its expression in a local society of amateurs, and had led "W. G." to adopt a nomadic life with various touring companies in Ireland and England, went down to the Antient Concert Rooms to see what the newly-formed Irish Literary Theatre was likely to do. They were delighted both with the play and the production; "yet, even so," says the author, "there seemed to be something missing." The actors were not Irish.

From the realisation of this lack came the idea of a company of Irish players, and in the end it was formed from the nucleus of the "Ormond Dramatic Society," which the Fays had built up some years before. Its first Irish production was "A.E.'s" "Deirdre"; the author, characteristically, had begun by writing two acts, and then had been inclined to abandon the play, as he "couldn't for the life of him think what the third act was going to be." "Deirdre" and Mr. Yeats's "Kathleen Ni Houlihan" were produced together in April, 1902, and from that day the Abbey Theatre began to exist in embryo. The success of the two plays was so great that it led to the formation of the Irish National Theatre Society—not to be confused with the Irish Literary Theatre Society, whose activities already had come to an end—and the new company began its search for a home.

An Uncomfortable Home

The record of those early years was well worth keeping. Lower Camden street was the first resting-place—"a very small hall, in a woeful state of dilapidation," which consisted of little more than four walls and a roof. The "theatre" opened in December, 1902, but, as Mr. Fay admits rather ruefully, it was not a very successful opening. "The hall was cold, and so was the audience," he recalls, "if you could call the few that turned up an audience. The roof leaked. The stage was so small that you couldn't swing a kitten, let alone a cat. . . . . The shops on either side of our entrance were a provision dealer on our left and a butcher on our right. . . . Large boxes of eggs encroached upon our entrance on the one side, while the butcher crowded the other with the half of a large cow that nearly touched the egg-boxes. The result was that those members of the public who were courageous enough to support us had to get in by slipping sideways between the eggs and the beef."

At last, after discouragements that might have brought any less vital movement to an end, the company got its great chance. Mr. Stephen Gwynn, through the Irish Literary Society, was enabled to give a few performances in London, and the amazing success of their visit changed the whole situation. The players had begun the year, as Mr. Fay says, "in a dire poverty that made us the laughing-stocks of Dublin . . . Yet within six months of our beggarly beginnings we had performed in London and been acclaimed as masters and pioneers in our art by all the most eminent critics." The rest of the story is common property—the recognition of the new Irish dramatic movement as something which could not be ignored, the growing interest in its work, and, finally, the arrival of the theatre's good fairy, Miss Horniman, who made the Abbey possible.

The "Playboy" Riots

The Abbey, however, has never been entirely free from trouble—perhaps, indeed, the storms that take place around it are a sign of its vigour—and trouble was not long in coming. As early as 1904 an offer was received to appear at the International Exposition at St. Louis, and its refusal led to a "split" in the company Dudley Digges left for the United States with several other actors, and the next year an even more serious "split" took place, when it was decided to put the theatre on a professional basis. From that time, however, comparative peace reigned until 1907, when the Abbey was faced with its first really severe struggle with public opinion—the "Playboy" riots. Incidentally, it is interesting to record Mr. Fay's judgment both on Synge's attitude to the public and the public's attitude towards his play. The author, he thinks, was moved to write "The Playboy of the Western World" partly out of a desire to annoy, for "he could not forgive the crass ignorance, the fatuity, the malevolence, with which 'The Well of the Saints' had been received." As to the riots, how many of us remember that they were caused less by the unflattering version of Irish peasant life than by the use of the word "shift," which was held to be highly indecent?

1907, also, marked the final storm, so far as W. G. Fay was concerned. A difference of opinion led to his resignation from the post of producer, which he had filled with such ability since the beginning of the whole project, and his departure from Ireland. What course the Abbey might have taken under his guidance can only be guessed, but his book, modestly written though so illuminating, leaves one with a regret that so able a man should have felt compelled to leave his real work behind him, unfinished. This record of what he did do for the Abbey, however, is enough to make his place secure in theatrical history.

New Novels

Spilt Milk. By Nis Petersen. Lovat Dickson, 7s. 6d. net.

MR. NIS PETERSEN already is favourably known through his "The Street of the Sandal-makers," but it may be doubted whether his new novel on the "troubles" of Ireland will enhance his reputation. Possibly, it is the opinions of the author, which are interwoven in the story, that produce a sense of dissatisfaction, because the story itself is quite good enough to be enthralling. Never in any novel of the period has the ordinary life of the country been so brilliantly shown, and used as a background for a story of ruthless bloodshed. Civil war goes along merrily with the daily business of the community; in the background move the outstanding figures of Michael Collins and Eamonn de Valera. But it is the tragic story of Barney McCleary which is related. Barney had fought for "Irish independence," but was satisfied that his ambition has been attained in the Treaty. He desired then only to be permitted to return to his little farm, marry Kitty and live happily ever after. But that desire was denied him; he was dragged into the Civil War against his will, and meets a tragic end, which the reader must discover for himself. The characters are all vividly portrayed and vital, and whatever else may be thought about the novel it will be found memorable. That a foreigner should have been able to give such a brilliant picture of Ireland in revolt is an achievement of which Mr. Nis Petersen may be proud; and it says much for his power to get well into the mind of a people other than his own.

The Farm at Santa Fé. By Laurence Kirk. London: Heinemann. 7/6 net.

Life and Love. By Denise Robins. London: Ivor Nicholson and Watson. 7/6 net.

A warning against reading the last four chapters before going to bed appears on the wrapper of "The Farm at Santa Fé," but unless one has a horror of snakes there is no reason why one should not read them, even in bed. Brazilian half-breeds do not drop live poisonous snakes down the chimneys of Irish houses, for which the distance of Brazil and St. Patrick both may be thanked. As a matter of fact, the last four chapters are the best in this story of a girl from a priggish English village who goes on a cruise and marries a man who has a strange sort of farm at Santa Fé. There are thrills, a touch of humour, and a plot that is unusual.

* * * * *

Denise Robins is a modern best seller. She has written almost forty novels in a very short space of time. There are parts of her latest work which read rather like mass production stuff, but those to whom romance, broken hearts, kisses and tears appeal should find "Life and Love" eminently satisfactory. The story is at no part dull, and even the most critical reader is liable to become absorbed once he gets to the stage where Francesia, "the girl with the crooning voice," marries Julian Grey for companionship. Miss Robins develops her theme very attractively, and her popularity can be understood

Under Suspicion. By H. W. Leggett. London: John Hamilton. 3/6.

The problem in this mystery novel is: Who killed Chummy Lipscombe? No doubt Chummy deserved death, but not everybody who earns that punishment gets his just wages. Chummy had been pestering the bohemian beauty, Justine Harborough, over her gambling debts, and he was not her only creditor. Her only realisable assets were the pearls on a necklace procured for her by her father. And even the pearls were only on approval. Her father had troubles enough of his own, but if his uncle, Mortimer, died he stood to gain a full million pounds. From this bare outline the readers will get no clue for an answer to the question. But many will follow the trails with breathless interest, and some will rejoice at the story's deliriously happy ending.

The Home of the Spaniard. By Arthur Behrend. Heinemann. 7/6 net.

Storm Signals. By Joseph C. Lincoln. Appleton-Century 7/6 net.

A new writer appears in Mr. Arthur Behrend, who tells a story which, in the early chapters, so delighted the reviewer that he thought that a new star had risen. A young man gets work in a Spanish commercial office in Liverpool, and gives a picture of that great port so vivid that we seem to have lived there. He is kidnapped and taken to Spain, and soon is involved in revolutionary politics and wild adventure. The smell of the Spanish scene is in the pages. Seldom was there a more convincing account of revolutionary war. Yet pleasure is marred by the bewildering morality of the hero. Having no quarrel with the King of Spain, he cheerfully throws himself into the Republican rebellion and shoots down policemen. There is something sickening in slaughter done with so complete an absence of principle. Heroism has the atmosphere of crime.

* * * * *

Mr. Joseph Lincoln is a popular American novelist, for whom Charles Dickens did not set a neglected example. He has written nearly forty books about old American life, and his latest is said to be typical of the whole. We have enjoyed this book, but not enough to seek more in the same quiet, but realistic style, pedestrian and praiseworthy.

Paths of Glory. By Humphrey Cobb. Heinemann. 7/6 net.

The concluding stages of this book must be among the most dramatic ever written on the subject of the Great War. A French division has refused to advance in the face of a murderous barrage. A general, who saw glory for himself in this attack, orders ten soldiers to be shot from each division as a lesson to the others. He is persuaded of the lunacy of his suggestion, but insists that one man from each division must die. There are four divisions concerned; but because the commanding officer of one division refuses to pick one of his own men for execution, and because this officer has a pull with "those higher up," only three wretched men are sent to face the firing squad. How these three were chosen makes almost incredibly dramatic reading. All the time one feels that this blind cruelty cannot be permitted to continue, that someone with authority must interfere to prevent the slaughter of innocent, courageous soldiers; but the demagogues at the front are all-powerful. The three men are found guilty of cowardice by a summary court-martial, and the sentence is carried out. As each body falls, a sergeant fires his revolver into "a brain that was already dead."

Travels in Africa

Libya and Morocco Under Latin Rule

Camels through Libya. By Dugald Campbell. London: Seeley Service. 18/- net. Quest Romantic. By Captain F. H. Mellor. London: Selwyn and Blount. 15/- net.

HERE are two very good books of travel, which have particular interest at this time.

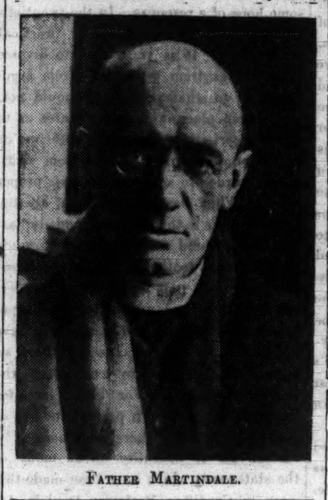

Mr. Campbell, a robust, adventurous sort of traveller, went through the Italian colony of Libya with no white friend, and saw how Italy rules black Africans. His verdict on Italian rule is one of unbounded praise. In fact, his salutations of Fascismo are so cordial that his impartiality trembles in the doubt. From the fringes of the Sahara to the oases of Upper Egypt he went, admiring ever, and he addressed to Marshal Badoglio, Governor-General of Libya, in Italian, thus:—

> After having travelled unarmed, and having viewed peaceful and industrious populations, which, under the guidance of Your Excellency, have found material and economic well-being, I beg to express the sense of my profound admiration and thanks.

Mr. Campbell's most remarkable impression, after that of Italian efficiency, courtesy and justice, was the decaying state of Islam. He never saw his Moslem servants pray, and he got the impression that the Mohammedan religion is dying.

to Morocco is the way to felicity. He opens with a fine conspectus of Moroccan history, which shows how close are our own days to fierce barbarism; and then proceeds with a lively account of his journey, illustrated with splendid photographs.

Islam does not seem to be dying in Morocco. Christians still are at a disadvantage there. The progress of the Sultan, although he is protected by the French, is impressive, sacred. Something of the air of the Arabian Nights lingers.

Travels of a Jesuit

Athens, Argentine, Australia. By Rev. C. C. Martindale, S.J. London: Sheed and Ward. 7/6 net.

FATHER MARTINDALE travelled to Buenos Aires for the Eucharistic Congress of 1934, and was surprised by the thoroughness with which the Argentine people threw themselves into the event. Religion is not at its best in that region, as he frankly tells; but the Congress roused up a dormant zeal. Yet—

> How different was Dublin! Continental visitors found it very "silent": park and city were murmurous with rosaries rather than clamorous with hymns—there was none of that "detonation" of divine praises which set the pigeons wheeling from the towers of the Sydney Cathedral and was audible in the very aeroplanes. But only in Dublin, so far as I know, was practically every house illuminated, and the poorer the house the more generous the candles . . . . . .

Buenos Aires, like Dublin, was everywhere beflagged, and the Congress badge glittered on hovels no less than on hotels; the Lord undoubtedly "signed" the city: but I doubt whether anything will be so beautiful as the vision you could entertain at night in Ireland of every home a sanctuary; every hearth an altar; the very ledges of the windows shrines. The next Congress, at Manila, should provide quite a new contrast.

A country, Father Martindale says, "is happy in proportion as its clergy approximate to greatness." The Argentine clergy are too few for their task. Vocations are few, but increasing; Spain supplies priests whose personal traditions sometimes entail difficulties with the native people. Of New Zealand's State Father Martindale has some alarming things to say in his notes on travel in Australasia. He fears the loss there of the white race through race suicide. In Greece he was struck by the chemical corrosion of the Parthenon. Acid-laden smoke from the modern capital is doing more harm than the shells of other days. The great columns are flaking and crumbling through the proximity of civilisation.

MR. STEPHEN LEACOCK ON HUMOUR

PIONEERS OF THE AMERICAN TRADITION

"American humour rose on the horizon of the nineteenth century as one of the undisputed national products of the new republic. Of American literature there was much doubt in Europe; of American honesty, much more; of American manners, more still. But American humour found a place alongside of German philosophy, Italian music, French wine, and British banking. No one denied its peculiar excellence and its distinctive national stamp."

THIS passage from Mr. Stephen Leacock's excellent little book on Mark Twain, noticed in these pages when it appeared, has come back to my mind this week as I put down the latest work by the same writer (Humour. By Stephen Leacock. London: Lane. 7/6 net). Mr. Leacock can make me laugh more easily than most humorous writers, and I have found a great deal of entertainment in this volume, although it does not, I think, show him at his best. The ghost of a plan stalks through it, and gets in Mr. Leacock's way. It is only when he forgets that he is engaged on a study of a difficult subject that I recognise again the touch which so delighted Europe in his earlier books. For such passages—they are mostly specimens to illustrate his points—and because he has so keen an eye for what is really funny in English humour, I can recommend this book. The strange inaccuracy of much of it may offend purists. Mr. Leacock quotes a line from Tennyson twice and gets it wrong once; quotes from a single stanza of Byron twice and gets it wrong twice, in different ways; fathers upon Wordsworth a line which I believe to have been written in parody of him; considers that the spelling "firance" in 1650 was a ludicrous error; and goes wrong over Dr. Watson's first wife. There is a hint of the vacation exercise about the book.

A Great Tradition

Mr. Leacock lives in Canada, and he has a much more intimate knowledge of the English humorists than can be found in the works of the comic writers who flourished south of the United States border in the last century. Yet he belongs to their tradition, and is, I think, its greatest upholder.

The general reader on this side of the Atlantic knows curiously little of what may be called the classical period of American humour. Yet it is scarcely too much to say that the comic writers were the first to give America a literature of her own. Great books appeared there in the nineteenth century, but for the most part they belonged to an English or European culture. There was nothing either English or European about Sam Slick or the Biglow Papers. They were America, rough and crude perhaps, but at the same time new and vital.

Nobody now reads these pioneers. The Biglow Papers was a work of importance in its day, and had no small influence in the crusade against slavery in the 'forties. But the comic spelling which was to be a characteristic of the earlier writers defeats us. Here is Hosea Biglow's introduction to one of his poems:

> Mr. Editer,—As I wuz kinder prunin' round the Dbait in the sennit cum inter my mine An so i took and sot it to wut I call a mussry time. I hev made sum connable Gentlemun speak that dident speak in a Kind uv Poetikul lie sense the seeson is dreffle backerd up This way, ewers as ushul.

A writer who employed the same device with much greater skill was "Artemus Ward" (Charles F. Browne), whose quaint and pathetic personality endeared his works to me at an early age. Artemus appeared before the public as a travelling showman with a tent of waxworks. Mr. Leacock quotes, and, I regret to observe, quotes with small approval, his "High-handed Outrage at Utica," which belongs to this first period. This is the passage which Abraham Lincoln read to his Cabinet just before he submitted to it the famous Declaration which was to end slavery in America:

> I day as I was giving a descripshun of my Beests and Snaiks in my usual flowry stile what was my scorn and disgust to see a big burly feller walk up to the cage containin my wax figgers of the Lord's Last Supper, and cease Judas Iscarrot by the feet and drag him out on the ground. He then commenced to pound him as hard as he cood.

Artemus reasons with him, explaining that it is only a wax figure:

> Sez he, "That's all very well fur you to say but I tell you that Judas Iscarrot can't show hisself in Utiky with impunerty by a darn sight!" with which observashun he kaved in Judassis hed. I sood him, and the Joory brawt in a verdick of Arson in the 3d. degree.

Artemus as Lecturer

For Artemus at this time abbreviation was the essence of style, and such expressions as "going 4 2 see him" are common in his work. At the very end of his short career he reverted to this manner in a series of papers written for "Punch," but his middle years were devoted largely to comic sketches and to a series of what he described as "speaking a piece" and the English Press sedately called "lectures of a humorous nature." These lectures were delivered by Artemus in a lugubrious drawl and with every appearance of the deepest seriousness, and the laughter of the audience gave great offence to the lecturer. They were illustrated by panoramas, and, as Artemus found that good panoramas were very expensive, he resorted instead to extremely bad ones, whose imperfections seemed to plunge him into the depths of gloom. Simple fun, perhaps, to us in these days of the cinema; and yet these lectures, reduced to cold print, have kept something of their sparkle after seventy odd years. A few may recall the quaint sentence with which the lecturer often concluded: "Ladies and gentlemen, my lecture is over. Those who refuse to leave the hall will be forcibly ejected."

Literature and the Mining Camp

Bret Harte has stood the test of time better than Ward, and specimens of his verse will be found in most of the comic anthologies. Everyone remembers his geological society, and how:

> Abner Dean of Angel's raised a point of order, when
> A chunk of old red sandstone took him in the abdomen;
> And he smiled a sort of sickly smile and curled up on the floor,
> And the subsequent proceedings interested him no more.

The menace to American industry of Chinese cheap labour has been forgotten, but not so Harte's Ah Sin and his remarkable success at poker, "a game he did not understand."

> In his sleeves, which were long,
> We found twenty-four packs,
> Which was going it strong,
> Yet I state but the facts;
> And we found in his nails, which were taper,
> What is frequent in tapers—that's wax.

Harte's real achievement was that he turned the rough life of the Western mining-camp into literature. "The Luck of Roaring Camp" and other books told the New England States that their country stood for more than the pallid elegancies of Boston, and their eager reception in England showed the Old World becoming conscious that the new had something to say to it.

Mark Twain

To this period also belong a number of lesser writers, among whom I recall with affection Max Adeler, the author of "Elbow-Room" and other amusing works. But a much greater figure than any of them appeared on the horizon in the early 'sixties, and from that time to the end of the century the history of American literature is largely the history of Mark Twain. He, too, like Harte, found himself in the mining camp, and it is pleasant to recall that it was a chance meeting with Artemus Ward in Nevada that sent him to San Francisco, and, eventually, to world-wide fame. It is in Twain's work that the differences between American and English humour may best be studied. The directness, often the crudeness, of it is in strange contrast to our own mild and good-mannered approach to the comic. It must not be condemned on this score. American humour is never, I think, subtle. Its virtues are of another and very real kind. But with Twain we are upon ground that is, or ought to be, well-trodden. His books are readily obtainable everywhere. A study of his forerunners calls for considerable research and much hunting among the second-hand dealers, but anyone who has a taste for robust humour will find his trouble repaid.

Four Great Lives

Great Lives: Prince Charles Edward. By Carola Oman. Wolsey. By Ashley Sampson. Captain Cook. By Lieutenant-Commander R. T. Gould. Abraham Lincoln. By D. W. Brogan. London: Duckworth. 2/- net apiece.

THE handy and highly agreeable series of biographies which we have commended already receives four good additions. The volume on Prince Charlie is one of the best short lives of the gallant Young Pretender that we have seen. Few subjects would seem to be more threadbare, yet Miss Oman, thanks to an hereditary gift of historical acumen, and a gracious, scholarly style, makes all live again, and is just.

Mr. Ashley Sampson is another good stylist. His account of Wolsey, that strange, dark tragic figure, is done with power, and we are left to wonder at the end whether the tears of a few poor grateful folk will weigh in the judgment of that statesman's much-vexed soul.

Captain Cook's was a name to conjure with in our youth; but already the reading of his voyages had gone out of fashion. Stat nominis umbra. It is pleasant to come on a well-written book that gives fresh life to this hero of other generations, and tells just what he did in the opening up of the South Seas before he came to his tragic end in a petty affray.

A Life of Lincoln, so convenient as Mr. Brogan's agreeable book, hardly needs recommendation. The famous utterances ring anew. In this day of democracy's eclipse it is strange and salutary to read once more those noble words of a man who feared not to seek justice "with malice toward none, with charity for all." Is it not a sorry turn of the wheel that has cast down a Lincoln's ideals and has exalted a Mussolini's?

THE FUTURE OF AUSTRALIA

INVASION PROBLEM

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

"Immigration or Ultimate Invasion," is the future for Australia, according to Sir Raphael W. Cilento (Director-General of Health and Medical Services for the State of Queensland), who gave an address on "Some Problems of Racial Pressure in the Pacific," before members of the British Medical Association, at their annual meeting at Melbourne to-day

The rapid fall in the birthrate, he said, the declining proportion of youth, and with it the declining proportion of potential mothers, were all actually correcting the disparity between population, production and consumption in all countries, except Italy, Russia and Japan. It should be the natural and desirable solution, unless it meant, as it so frequently did, a new inevitability of conflict with or between those other powers and a loss of frontiers and culture.

The population of Japan represented four persons to the acre of arable land, and was increasing. It appeared inevitable that on present figures the population of Japan proper would increase to 113,000,000, at which period England and America would reach their period of stalemate and decline — and with them Australia. This was a situation to be feared, both in the interests of these countries and of the world in general.

In Australia the decline in the birthrate and population mirrored most alarmingly what was seen in Western Europe. But in the case of Australia it acted not as a safeguard, but towards disaster. Australia could not preserve her frontiers unless they could effectively occupy the land they claimed and the problem was a vast one.

It was in respect of natural increase that Australia's population figures were most disturbing. Her birthrate to-day was one of the lowest in the world. The average age of population was rapidly rising, and the proportion of youth declining. The natural increase for 1931 was half that of 1891. The solution was immigration or ultimate invasion.

Japan, in dealing with her pressure of population, had chosen the only means consistent with her exalted nationalism. She had extended to the Equator, in the South—her sampans were permanently established on the north coast of Australia—she extended to the Arctic North, and was developing a new contest with the Soviet for Sakhalien and its fuel supplies, and in the West she had absorbed Manchuria and dominated Mongolia.

Australia depended to-day for her defence and development upon peace and security, for which there was no guarantee. Italy, Russia, Germany and Japan, discounting any reliance upon conciliation and concession, had encouraged a hypernationalism that might rapidly become imperialistic in practice. A period of increasing pressure in the Pacific appeared imminent and inevitable.

THE BOY WHO GIVES NO TROUBLE

MOST PRONE TO MENTAL ABNORMALITY

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The problem of the "good" quiet boy, who is never any trouble to his parents, but who afterwards develops a mental abnormality, was discussed by Dr. W. S. Dawson, of Sydney University, in an address on "Mental Derangement in Adolescence" to members of the British Medical Association, at its annual meeting in Melbourne to-day.

Youth should be full of effort, said Dr. Dawson. The quiet, passive adolescent was the one who seemed most likely to develop the more serious derangements. The personality which was inadequate in the emotional, rather than the purely intellectual field, was sufficiently common to be significant.

In these sensitive and self-centred individuals character development was liable to be stunted through the absence of social contacts, and the rivalries and struggles for self-expression which should comprise the essence of normal activity. Hence it came about that the most trivial failure, the merest decline from quite exceptional ideals, threw this type of adolescent more into himself, and added yet another bar to his self-constructed prison.

Unhealthy ruminations, devotion to abstract study, religious exercises which savoured of self-gratification or of a maudlin penance, were some of the undesirable accretions of introversion. Many doctors learned to hear with dismay praises sung by the parents of psychotics: "He was always such a good lad and never gave us any trouble"; "he is so studious and serious-minded; he spends hours over books on philosophy and psychology."

It was important to distinguish between the life of retirement and self-denial which was creative, and the type which was merely indulgent, essentially effortless, and futile. For a time there might be success in a narrow scholastic field, but one which was rarely maintained with the backing of a solid, well-developed personality. Hence not infrequently there occurred a disintegration of personality initiated by a failure to accept responsibility, or by some shortcoming in the field of emotion and sentiment, rather than of knowledge and intellect.

As methods of treatment, Dr. Dawson suggested handicrafts to provide the means for self-expression and the satisfaction of achievement; recreation in groups, to encourage sociability; and the maintenance of psychological contact between physician and patient. The recognition and correlation of anomalies of character and temperament during the school years, and the examination of the child of psychotic parents, offered a possibility of preventing or arresting more serious abnormalities.

DRAMATISED

by REV. FATHER M. H. GAFFNEY, O.P.

With Introduction by Miss Margaret Pearse, T.D., and Hints for Production.

This book will doubtless be considered one of the most important issues of the year. Though the stories are well known, the brilliant dramatisation of Fr. Gaffney gives them an additional attraction, and people who do not as a rule read plays for pleasure will make a general appeal on account of their deep spirituality, their broad humanity, and the genius that turns words into literature. Fr. Gaffney's dramatisations comprise: "Iosagan," "The Priest," "Barbara," "Eoineen of the Birds," "The Thief," "The Roads," "The Mother," "The Dearg-Daol," "The Keening Woman," "The King," "The Master," "The Singer," and "Brigid of the Songs."

London Stock Markets staged a good recovery on the news from Geneva, and prices all round improved, especially in the gilt-edged section.—(Page 14.)

The Treasury bill rate fell to 10s. 6d. per cent., compared with 12s. 5d. per cent. last week. Gold was fixed at 140s. 10½d. per oz., and £155,000 was sold. The Bank bought £75,382 in bar gold. Silver was 29 9-16d. per oz.—(Page 14.)

Dublin Market was dull and business small. Dublin Tram Ordinary fell to 95s., and Guinness units closed 9d. lower at 140s. 9d.—(Page 14.)

France's Decision

The long uncertainty regarding France's attitude towards the Italo-Ethiopian dispute at last has been dissipated. In a speech that was worthy of his country's finest traditions M. Laval yesterday made a categorical statement of French policy to the Assembly of the League of Nations at Geneva, and the great enthusiasm with which his words were received indicates that the other nations needed only a lead to rally them to the side of international justice. The French Premier declared with emphasis that France would support the Covenant, come what might. It was the corner stone of French policy. Every agreement that had been made in recent years by French Governments either had begun or had ended at Geneva, and in the future as in the past the Republic would continue to base all its plans for security on the League. M. Laval made particular reference to Sir Samuel Hoare's frank statement of the previous day, and was most careful to interpret the British thesis as a guarantee to uphold the principles of the Covenant, not alone in the case of Italy versus Abyssinia, but also in the case of all other aggressors, present or to come. In other words, he suggested that the British Foreign Secretary had undertaken, if the necessity should arise, to support France in the invocation of League "sanctions" against the Germans. Be that as it may, the French now have made their choice between London and Rome. M. Laval took pains to insist on the abiding friendship of his country for Italy; but he was quite firm in his assurance that France was fully prepared to honour her obligations under the Covenant to the letter. Those obligations are very definite. If any nation goes to war without previously having exhausted every other means of settlement of a dispute, France, in common with all the other member-States of the League, will be bound at least to impose an economic boycott on the offender. M. Laval's acceptance of this duty is one of the most significant events that have occurred in Europe since the war.

Since Mr. Anthony Eden was snubbed by Signor Mussolini in Rome, Britain has taken the lead in the Abyssinian dispute. Although several of her own newspapers which wield much political influence have been making bitter attacks on the Government, Mr. Baldwin and his colleagues have not ceased to proclaim their entire loyalty to the principles of the League of Nations. For a time they were virtually alone in their stand for the Covenant. Timid folk in every country took the view that the Abyssinian problem did not concern them; that if Italy should choose to make war on an almost defenceless little country, no outside Power had any right to interfere, and that those that might venture to remind Signor Mussolini of his liabilities under the Covenant would receive well-deserved punishment at the hands of the Italians. To its lasting credit, the British Government refused to be intimidated. Although Great Britain has reduced her armaments to a dangerously low level, and although the Dominions have made it quite clear that they will commit themselves in advance to nothing, the Government has been admirably consistent in its attitude. From the outset it has contended that the whole future of the League of Nations would depend on its decision regarding Abyssinia. If it should allow Italy to invade the territory of one of its member-States without any kind of effective protest it would surrender all its principles, and would cease to have the slightest moral power in the world. Openly and privately British Ministers at home and in Geneva took their stand on the Covenant, and, not for the first time in modern history, surprised their critics by the high standards of international morality to which they submitted their policy. At first it seemed as if France would refuse to associate herself with the British point of view; and, in all the circumstances, nobody can blame the French Government for its hesitation. Now that M. Laval has spoken so clearly, however, there no longer can be the least doubt of Franco-British solidarity. Paris and London have made common cause and have given a new lease of life to the League.

Surely Signor Mussolini now will stay his hand. France's action yesterday is almost certain to prove decisive at Geneva, and not only the Little Entente, but most of the other Powers that are represented on the League will support the Franco-British attitude. Already the delegate of the Union of South Africa has pledged his country to support the League in the enforcement of "sanctions" if that grave decision should be taken; and it is manifest that the great mass of world opinion is strongly opposed to Signor Mussolini. One of the unhappy features of the present crisis is the fact that the outside world has no inkling of public opinion in Italy. The voice of the Duce is the only voice that is heard; for all the newspapers are muzzled, and the man-in-the-street has no chance to express his views. There are indications from private sources that the more responsible elements in Italy are beginning to feel rather anxious; but, of course, the youths whose political outlook is expressed in the slogan "Evviva Mussolini" are thirsting for a fight. Some of them even have been advocating a naval attack on Malta, and anti-British feeling is running very high. The Italian Press, while restrained in its comment, gives the impression that, while the Duce still is prepared to consider any proposals that may be advanced by the Committee of Five, he is going rapidly ahead with his plans for an offensive against Abyssinia. Huge purchases of rye, barley and dried beans are being made in Turkey and elsewhere, and the transport of troops to Eritrea continues with unabated speed. If Signor Mussolini persists in his intentions, an extremely dangerous situation will be created; for it will become clear that he is challenging the whole world. It is possible that the Committee of Five may produce some face-saving formula which will give Italy substantial advantages in Abyssinia without any infringement of the country's sovereignty; but all experience teaches that once an army has been mobilised withdrawal from action becomes exceedingly difficult. The next week probably will decide. Signor Mussolini can save Europe, or he can condemn it to a struggle that will shake civilised society to its foundations.

The Celtic Congress

It is not unfair to say that many of the speakers at this year's Celtic Congress have sought to lock the stable door after the horse has escaped—or, as they might hold, has been stolen. It is right, indeed, that some effort should be made to preserve the Celtic languages and the Celtic forms of art, but there does seem to be a fallacy underlying the point of view that these things represent a form of civilisation which must be preserved against the civilisation of England or France. Several hundred years have passed since the problem could be stated in those terms. Several hundred years ago the Celtic tradition was strong enough in Ireland, Wales, Scotland and Brittany to make such a resistance worth while, and a call to defend the old forms of life against outside pressure might have had some hope of a response. In the twentieth century has such a plea any practical application? It is very hard to divorce these things from sentiment—from arguments as to what should, or should not, have taken place, and from debates as to whether certain developments were just or unjust—but one must escape from sentiment in order to see them in their proper light. What has happened in all the Celtic centres is that the invading civilisation has secured a foothold, and much more than a foothold. It has reached the stage when it is no longer an invader, but a native; and any attempt to expel it now from Ireland or Brittany will have no better chance of success than an attempt in England to counteract the Norman Conquest. For better, or for worse, it has become a part of the life of the country, and, therefore, there is a curious air of unreality about many of the statements which have been made this week in Cardiff. Professor Daniels, for example, spoke of "fighting the battle of our Celtic civilisation against an Imperial Power greater than Rome"; spoke of the Pan-Celtic consciousness, and described the need of the Celts to struggle against outside influences. Do his words mean anything when translated into cold fact? Is it possible, at this late hour, to disentangle the roots of a Celtic civilisation from those roots which have become so closely intertwined with it? For an answer one need go no further than the Free State, where the effort has been made. Superficially, the Gaelic side of our life has made great progress—by compulsion—but there is truth in a Welsh newspaper's remark that the revival has been due, not to popular demand, but to political pressure. Great sums have been spent upon it by successive Governments; but can anybody say with truth that we are nearer to a Gaelic State now than we were twelve years ago, or that the Irish language finds it any easier to hold its own, even in the Gaeltacht?

Road and Rail

In Great Britain, as in other countries, a stern fight is in progress between the railways and the roads. Even in the opening years of the post-war period it was clear that such a conflict must come, and the extremely rapid development which has taken place in all the branches of motor transport has suggested to many writers on the subject that the railways are doomed to gradual extinction. They entered into the fight with certain handicaps, some the legacies of the war period and others imposed upon them by the grave strikes of the time and the general atmosphere of uneasiness to which recurrent hints of nationalisation gave rise. The science of motor traction, on the other hand, was young and vigorous. For some years the railways seemed to face defeat, and almost to expect it. More recently, however, it has become clear that the victory of the roads is unlikely to be either so swift or so complete as it was promised to be. The British railways have perceived that, while a considerable part of their passenger traffic for short distances must be lost to the roads, an improved standard in speed and comfort is an almost certain defence against the competition of the omnibus in longer journeys. Accordingly, trains have been made faster and accommodation more luxurious. The provision of "summer" and other tickets at a reduced rate has proved a good weapon against the omnibus, one of whose attractions is its low fares. For the carriage of goods competition has been, and continues to be, very keen, but here again the railways have met it with an increase of speed. When the course of events is surveyed, it seems safe to suggest that the present year has seen the fight enter upon a new stage. In all branches of locomotion speed is sought for, and the exploits of Sir Malcolm Campbell and others prove beyond doubt that road traffic is capable of a much higher standard of achievement in this respect. The imposition of the speed limit in Britain, however, suggests that the tendency may be to check speed on the roads rather than to encourage it, at least in the populous districts where the omnibus must look for most of its custom. To the railways no such restrictions apply, and the autumn time-tables of the great lines show that they are alive to their advantage.

The Truth Machine

A solicitor in a recent court case produced an instrument to measure the blood pressure of a witness. This was no mere idle frivolity, but a scientific attempt to obtain the truth. If, and when, the witness might decide to re-arrange the facts of the case, or to invent new ones for the delectation of the Justice, his blood pressure would be increased by the strain of composition, and his anxiety over the reception of the completed opus. The "lie detector" would reveal this internal stress, and justice could be meted out with certainty. In the opinion of the solicitor the instrument worked so well that he feared that it might burst through over-exertion. We believe that a similar system is used to examine witnesses in American courts; but if Ireland can threaten the safety of a "lie detector" the American model must be far more powerfully constructed. The cinema has led one to believe that anyone who tells the truth in an American court of law is mentally unstable. Firstly, there is the "shyster" lawyer, who proves to the general satisfaction that his client was resident in Idaho when a mortal enemy found everlasting peace at the end of a shotgun in Florida. Probably, such professional men are impervious to the excitement of perjury; but if one of them had an off day, when connected in series with a "lie detector," the result might be cataclysmic. Then there is the lady claiming alimony, who has left her sables with the chauffeur, and donned her gardening coat as a pointer to the jury. As she describes her miserable, but wholly imaginary, existence in a slum tenement the needle of the least sensitive detector in all America should quiver firmly above the maximum register. We wonder, however, if the system is quite fool-proof. A very large noise, indeed, has gone the way of all flesh, and only a janitor knows the way of his passing. In the witness box the janitor is asked if he could identify the assassins. He is a good citizen and replies that he could; but the "lie detector" shows that his blood pressure only could be measured accurately in thousands of pounds per square inch. It is not evidence of a lying tongue, however, but merely a sign that the janitor knows the assassins' followers have noted his reply.

LONDON LETTER

FRANCE AND THE LEAGUE

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
FRIDAY NIGHT.

M. LAVAL'S strong support of the League, even though he was careful to avoid any references to sanctions, is highly approved here. French foreign policy is based almost entirely on the League of Nations, and a blow to that institution would have grave repercussions in France as well as among members of the Little Entente. M. Laval, like other members of his Government, is nervous about Germany's attitude and the possibility that Italy and Germany may unite in a military and economic arrangement, but evidently he has come to the conclusion that in such an event the full support of the League would be of greater value than the somewhat doubtful adhesion of Italy. In addition, by his speech to-day M. Laval has gratified M. Benes, of Czechoslovakia, and M. Titulescu, of Rumania, both strenuous supporters of the League and men of great importance in the Little Entente.

An Offer to Italy?

The French Foreign Minister's speech this morning was not a long one, but it was so much to the point that when M. Laval had finished there was prolonged applause, and the speaker was overwhelmed with congratulations. It is significant, perhaps, that the stock markets in London immediately responded to the speech with a rise in prices, while the price of wheat fell sharply. The next step to be taken by the League, it was rumoured in Geneva, will be an offer of concessions by the Powers on condition that Italy withdraws most of her forces from the neighbourhood of Abyssinia. This condition is said to have been communicated to Signor Mussolini by M. Laval in person after a series of conversations with Sir Samuel Hoare and Baron Aloisi.

The League's Interpreters

Few people understand how it is that all those who are present at the League's meetings at Geneva are able to follow what the speaker at the moment is saying. At one time the speeches would have been given in French, but to-day French is no longer the common language of diplomatists, and science has been brought in to enable all to understand what is taking place. When Sir Samuel Hoare rose to make his speech on Wednesday each of the delegates was able to choose the language in which he preferred to listen. He took a pair of earphones, gave a sign by an electric switch, and the speech was given him by an expert translator who heard the speech in English and gave it to the listener almost simultaneously. Most of the delegates understood English, but there were those from some States who preferred to listen in a more familiar language. The change is wonderful when it is recalled that in former days the speaker had to wait while his sentences were translated into different languages.

Holland and the Guilder

Dr. Colihn, the Netherlands Prime Minister, has been asked by the "India Rubber Journal" whether native exports of rubber will be brought down this year so as to conform to the quotas fixed by the Dutch East Indies Government. He has answered that, though there are considerable difficulties, the Government's obligations towards native rubber exports under the international restriction scheme will be fulfilled. In the same interview Dr. Colihn repeated his conviction that the guilder's position is technically sound and there is no justification for thinking that the Dutch Government will devalue it. Dr. Colihn remains pledged to gold, and to a guilder at full gold value. A good many Dutch traders, however, deeply regret that Holland did not devalue in the last crisis, and expect further currency trouble later this year.

The New Whitehall

A quarter of a century ago the Government of the day decided that a considerable part of Whitehall should be rebuilt, but the coming of war caused the scheme to be postponed indefinitely. Recently the matter has been reconsidered, and after all these years completed plans are about to be submitted to the present Government for final approval and acceptance. The scheme outlined will take at least eight years to complete. It provides for a great block of buildings to accommodate about seven thousand civil servants. The building, which will have a frontage of six hundred feet on Whitehall and a depth of three hundred feet to the Victoria Embankment, will replace the present Ministries of Labour and Transport and the offices used by the Secretariat of the Cabinet. The building, of steel and Portland stone, ten storeys high, will be completed by sections, so that the officials may be able to take possession as soon as possible. It is proposed to allow ample space around the building to be used for gardens to relieve the rather severe-looking building. The architect of the building is Mr. Vincent Harris, who submitted the successful design twenty-three years ago.

A Welcome for ex-King George

Many Greeks resident in London are preparing a great welcome for ex-King George of Greece when he returns south after his visit to Balmoral and other houses in Scotland. The King has always been a popular figure among his fellow-countrymen here, and most of them are convinced that he will be recalled to the Greek Throne as a result of the plebiscite to take place on October 27. The difficulty is to arrange what form the welcome shall take. A railway station demonstration is not considered dignified or sufficient, and there will be little opportunity for a celebration of any other kind.

Welsh Coal for Ireland

The coal-cattle pact concluded last January has more than doubled exports from South Wales to the Irish Free State. The latest figures issued by the Cardiff Chamber of Commerce show that in the first seven months of this year 235,000 tons of Welsh coal were shipped to Ireland, as compared with 103,000 tons for the same period last year. The increase has proved a boon to small coastways steamers, as the coals shipped from Cardiff, Newport and Swansea are booked for comparatively small Irish ports. For a long period many of these steamers, if they have not been laid up, have been working only at intervals. The Irish Free State imposed a duty of five shillings a ton on British coal in 1932, which resulted in the transfer of big contracts for coal to Poland and Germany. Under the new arrangement Ireland reverts to Welsh coal in return for increased purchases of Irish cattle. Foreign fuel supplies, it is stated, failed to give satisfaction.

Precautions Against Bombs

A demonstration of a new fire-extinguisher for use against incendiary bombs will take place in the East End on Monday, under the auspices of the Rome Society for the distribution of apparatus for civil protection. Recently a demonstration was given in the grounds of the Vatican and in the Pope's library, and the Vatican has now been fitted with this protection against bombs.

Dr. Stuart Cross, Melbourne, speaking at the British Medical Association yesterday, stated that owing to the delay in treatment only a quarter of the cases of stomach cancer were curable when discovered. Early radiological investigation was essential.

FRANCE STANDS BY COVENANT

BRITAIN PLEASED WITH M. LAVAL'S SPEECH

ITALY WILL GO AHEAD AS BEFORE

RESTRAINED COMMENTS BY PARIS PRESS

IN an atmosphere of tense expectation, M. Laval yesterday declared in the League Assembly that France stands side by side with Britain in her determination to fulfil her obligations under the League Covenant in the event of Italy making war on Abyssinia.

While this speech is acclaimed in France and Britain, its reception in Italy and Germany has been cool. It was pointed out in Rome that the speech would in no way affect Italy's plans, and Italy will go ahead as before.

In British quarters M. Laval's speech is regarded as a definite pledge that France will live up to the full obligations of the Covenant. In France it is taken as an indication that Sir Samuel Hoare has promised M. Laval that Britain will support sanctions against an aggressor in any part of Europe.

Other developments yesterday were:—

Mr. F. W. Rickett, the financier, who obtained the oil concession in Abyssinia on behalf of American interests, stated on reaching England: "I have bought this concession in Abyssinia, and I am going to stick to it, lock, stock and barrel."

Mr. Te Water, the South African delegate at Geneva, in a broadcast address, declared that, in the event of a violation of the Covenant, South Africa would stand by the League Covenant to the extent of applying sanctions, should the League members decide unanimously on this course.

The Sub-Committee of Five on the Italo-Ethiopian dispute, which is apparently reshaping the Paris proposals with a view to making them more acceptable to Italy, is unlikely to be able to announce its report before next Tuesday.

The Emperor of Ethiopia, in a broadcast appeal to Europe last night, reiterated his country's desire for peace, and its determination to offer a fierce opposition to any aggression.

"FRANCE WILL NOT FLINCH"

M. Laval said:—

"In a debate which is of such grave moment and where each person must assume his responsibility, it is my duty to cause the voice of my country to be heard. I have already made a statement before the Council of the League of Nations. I made it, I believe, clearly. France is faithful to the Covenant. She cannot fail in her obligations.

"The League of Nations was born of the sufferings of mankind. It was erected upon the ruins left by the war and conceived in order to prevent the return of war. The unreserved adhesion that we have always given the League has been both enthusiastic and considered. We place our hopes in the co-operation of all peoples for the realisation of our ideals of peace.

FAITH REMAINS

"It has happened at certain difficult periods that we have known real disappointment at Geneva, but, nevertheless, our faith has never weakened. With a perseverance that no difficulty has discouraged, the representatives of France have always worked to increase the moral authority of the highest international institution. They have sought, and always continue to seek, to make it stronger and to furnish it with means of action.

"From the protocol of 1924 to the conference for the reduction and limitation of armaments they have always subscribed with the same fervour to the doctrine of collective security. This doctrine remains, and will always be, that of France. The Covenant remains our international law.

"How could we allow such a law to become weakened? It would be a denial of our ideals, and our interests are opposed to such a course. The policy of France is founded in its security on the League of Nations. All our agreements with our friends and with our allies now go through Geneva or end in Geneva.

"Let it suffice to recall the Locarno Treaty, our agreements with the Little Entente, the Franco-Soviet Pact, and the Rome agreement.

FRENCH SATISFACTION

"Any attack against the Geneva institution would be an attack against our very security. In affirming our fidelity to the Covenant I renew and confirm the declaration which all representatives of my country have ever made from this rostrum. Should such renewal be necessary in the present circumstances it should not cause any surprise.

"In his speech, which revealed a high level of thought and in which were to be found the liberal traditions of Great Britain and its appreciation of universality, Sir Samuel Hoare told us on Wednesday of the determination of Great Britain to adhere without reservation to the system of collective security. He declared that this determination was, and would be, the guiding principle of the international policy of Great Britain.

"No country has received with greater satisfaction than France the words of the British Foreign Secretary. No country is better able to appreciate and measure the scope of such an undertaking. The solidarity in the responsibilities of all kinds, in all circumstances of time and place, which is implied for the future by such a declaration, constitutes a date in the history of the League of Nations. I rejoice with my country, which fully realises all the necessity for a close collaboration with Great Britain for the defence of peace and the safeguarding of Europe.

A HAPPY DREAM

"Already on the 3rd of February last in London our two Governments drew up together a programme that was big with hope. The news of this programme was received with real enthusiasm throughout the world. Obstacles have arisen which have hindered realisation. I have had a happy dream. Is it now on the point of realisation?

"I speak in the name of a country that does not fear war, but hates it; a country which is determined to remain strong, and which, possessing the highest military virtues, is nevertheless animated by a passionate will to peace. We have no prejudices against any people. We want peace by the collaboration of all.

"It is not without emotion that, having signed the agreement of Rome, I now refer to the dispute that is weighing so heavily upon our assembly. On January 7th last Signor Mussolini and I settled definitely everything that might divide us in the interests, not only of our two countries, but in that of the peace of Europe.

"Realising, as I do, the value of Franco-Italian friendship, I have not neglected anything to avoid exposing the policy thus happily inaugurated between France and Italy to any blow. At Stresa, with the delegate of the British Government, we encountered the same desire and the same will to serve the cause of peace on the part of the chief of the Italian Government. I know that he is ready to persevere in this collaboration. I have said enough to show the value I attach to the maintenance of such a solidarity in the interests of the European community and of universal and general peace.

WILL FULFIL DUTY

"I have spared no effort for conciliation. We have all the same desire for agreement, and in the supreme effort which is being made by the Council I shall have the satisfaction to fulfil my duty as member of the League of Nations, as well as that dictated by friendship.

"I still entertain the hope that the Council may in a short time fulfil its rôle of conciliation. No doubt the task is difficult, but I persist in my belief that it is not hopeless. In the Committee of Five we are studying every proposal calculated to satisfy the legitimate desires of Italy that is compatible with respect for the sovereignty of another State-member of the League. It must be known that there is no disagreement between France and Great Britain in the effective search for this specific solution.

"We have known in the course of this year difficulties that seemed insurmountable. They were satisfactorily disposed of. Seeing that the question of the Saar and the Hungaro-Yugoslav disputes were European problems, must it be thought that they were the more easy to resolve for that reason? We succeeded yesterday. Shall we fail to-morrow?

"In that case a new situation more deeply stirring for all would call for our study. We are all linked by a solidarity that establishes our duty. Our obligations are inscribed in the Covenant. France will not evade them."

"FRANKNESS AND CLARITY"

FRENCH VIEW OF SPEECH

M. Laval's speech was received with satisfaction in Paris. Many found the Prime Minister's lead even more courageous and more outspoken than they had hoped.

The Temps says:—"It must be conceded that the position of France was defined with the same frankness and clarity as the position of Great Britain was defined by Sir Samuel Hoare. The new situation does not necessarily mean that the Abyssinian conflict must degenerate into an open war between Rome and Geneva. The Council must continue conciliation procedure to the end."

L'Information says:—"It is now certain that if war breaks out it will be localised, and, consequently, will not have a serious effect on world economic recovery."

The Journal des Debats:—"It was all the more necessary to dot the i's, since too many people over the Channel still seem to think that Britain can invoke and shuffle off principles as she likes."

Intransigeant:—"The future will show whether we have gone too quickly and whether Britain interprets solidarity in France's way."

NOT COMMITTED

Berlin commentators agree that the events of the last few days have once more made the League of Nations the centre of political discussions. Herr Paul Scheffer, in a message from Geneva to the Berliner Tageblatt, says that this fact is no proof that the League is really qualified to be the centre for a collective policy.

Herr Scheffer says: "M. Laval made a purely fundamental statement which will not prevent him from continuing to spare Italy and from helping her to overcome the danger of a threatening isolation, thus saving the Franco-Italian friendship."

The Deutsche Allgemeine Zitung and the Boersen Zeitung hint that French diplomacy is trying to "make capital" out of its rôle of mediator. It is the general opinion that M. Laval has not committed himself to any anti-Italian policy by his speech.

ROME CALM

Despite the apparently uncompromising nature of M. Laval's speech, feeling was calmer in Rome last evening. There is an impression that M. Laval's bark is worse than his bite, and he will not consent to join in sanctions against Italy in any circumstances. He is too wise a statesman, it is considered, not to realise that sanctions would disrupt Europe. Nevertheless, Italy had hoped that the Franco-Italian agreement reached early in the year would lead him to express more solidarity with Italy.

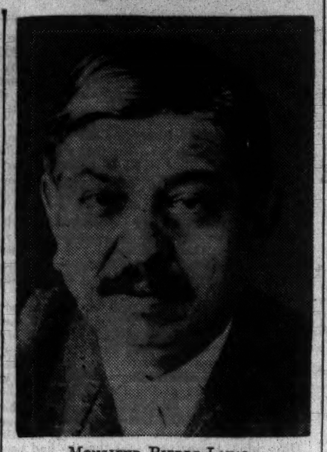

Signor Virginio Gayda, in a conciliatory article in the Giornale d'Italia, pays tribute to the friendship of M. Laval for Italy, and expresses the hope that he will eventually come to agree that Italian aspirations must be satisfied.

ROOSEVELT'S CONCERN

President Roosevelt, says Reuter, yesterday announced his thorough endorsement of the appeal to signatories of the Kellogg Pact to maintain world peace, issued by Mr. Cordell Hull, the U.S. Secretary of State, on Thursday night.

He expressed his concern over the present situation. Replying to questions at the regular Press conference yesterday, the President made it clear that if war breaks out abroad the United States Government will very definitely remain neutral.

Mr. Cordell Hull, commenting on M. Laval's speech, said that it was in impressive harmony with the world-wide peace movement. Interpreting the developments at Geneva as indicating a renewed spirit of peace, Mr. Hull said that he felt that the speech was expressive of the peace sentiment discernible in the capitals of the various nations.

MONSIEUR PIERRE LAVAL.

CONCILIATION EFFORT

COMMITTEE'S LAST ATTEMPT

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

GENEVA, Friday.

The Sub-Committee of five which is drawing up a report on the Italo-Ethiopian dispute held two meetings to-day. It is apparently reshaping the whole structure of the Paris proposals with a view to finding a basis more acceptable to Italy.

The idea of a mandate is fundamentally opposed to membership of the League. They are mutually exclusive. Consequently any reports based on any such contingency can be dismissed as fabrications.

An important point about the Committee's report is that it will be submitted as coming from the League as distinct from Britain and France. It will constitute the final effort at conciliation by the Council.

The report will be submitted to the two parties. If it is rejected by Italy, then the Council will have no other course open than to proceed under Article 15. This would mean a Commisison of Inquiry, recommendations, and eventually sanctions. Hitherto there has been marked determination to avoid all reference to this dread subject.

SANCTIONS

Intense interest has been aroused by the declaration of Mr. Te Water in his broadcast speech to-night that South Africa would join in any sanctions, provided they were agreed upon collectively. South Africa's is the first official delegate to proclaim that his country will not recoil even from sanctions.

Mr. Te Water said:—"The Union of South Africa is compelled by its geographical situation to take a long-range view, in contradistinction to what I may call an opportunistic view, of an episode which will inevitably, whether it develops one way or the other, provide a precedent for what I described here to-day as the future partition of Africa by the Great Powers.

"To seize African territory by force; to arm the black races of Africa for European wars, which will be the result of such seizure, are violations of such fundamental principles of the League system as would disrupt and destroy it immediately, were the member-nations of the League to permit it.

"Should any one of the parties to this dispute violate his own undertakings under the Covenant the South African Government will not hesitate, as a matter of national honour and conscience, to stand by the Covenant to the extent of applying sanctions, should the League members decide upon this course unanimously."

SUPPORT

The members of the Little Entente and the Balkan Entente met this evening, and decided that Mr. Puritch (Yugoslavia) should speak in the general discussion in the Assembly on behalf of the former, and Mr. Maximos (Greece) on behalf of the latter. Both will strongly support the speeches of Sir Samuel Hoare and M. Laval and urge the necessity of upholding the Covenant.

PREPARATIONS BY BRITAIN?

ITALIANS ALARMED

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

ROME, Friday.

While Italian warships are engaged in exercises in the vicinity of Malta, a cry of alarm has been raised in Italy over alleged British naval preparations in the Mediterranean.

"Nine British naval units have been added to the Mediterranean Fleet," says the Azione Colonaile, which is often the mouthpiece of the Colonial Office. "British garrisons have been reinforced; docks, ports and offensive and defensive works have been reorganised, and in more than one case strengthened.

"This has been especially the case at Gibraltar and Malta, where severe measures have been taken in connection with the landing of foreigners, and even of simple visitors.

"What does Britain mean by this concentration of formidable naval armaments? Is it simply a threat, or preparations for offensive action? A level of armaments has been reached which begins to threaten our position in the Mediterranean and the Red Sea."

The paper concludes with the warning: "Every new arrival of British units in our seas can only invite counter-measures on our part. If there is any question of transferring the British home fleet to our shores, our reply must be much more serious."

ABYSSINIA PREPARES

SOMALIS TO FIGHT

ITALIAN POISON PLOT STORY

LEADER WANTS WAR TO START

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

ADDIS ABABA, Friday.

WAR fever and military preparations are spreading all over the country. All kinds of sensational rumours are current. One reports a plot by Italian agents to poison the water reservoirs near Direwada, one of the principal Abyssinian advance bases.

It is said that an old Arab sweet merchant was bribed by Italian agents in Djibouti (French Somaliland) to go to Abyssinia ostensibly on business and commit the outrage. The plot is stated to have been discovered by a Somali woman, who denounced the Arab to the Ethiopian consul at Djibouti.

When the Arab crossed the frontier he was arrested. It is alleged that many packets of poison and 5,000 French francs were found upon him.

FIGHTERS RALLY

Tens of thousands of Somalis are rallying to the Ethiopian colours. Armed with rifles of various old patterns and swords, they are gathering around Daghpur. One of the most fiery leaders, Geradmash Afwark, is impatiently waiting for an Italian advance to begin, and is seeking permission from the Emperor to launch an immediate attack on Italian Somaliland.

Other forces in the Ogaden are reported to include 10,600 troops trained by Belgian officers and armed with modern rifles. They are accompanied by a small detachment of cavalry and a camel corps.

The Emperor has made a personal appeal to the Imam of the Yemen not to sell cattle, grain and other necessaries to the Italian forces. It is reported that the Imam has agreed, and a special envoy bringing fifteen tons of gifts for the Imam has been despatched by the Emperor. It is understood that this envoy will organise an anti-Italian campaign in the Yemen. Twelve Catholic amharras have been arrested at Jijiga on charges of espionage on behalf of Italy.

CAVES FOR SHELTER

Many of the inhabitants of Harrar are digging caves in the mountains as shelters against the expected Italian aid raids. One such cave collapsed, killing five women and children.

In the country of the fierce Danakils all the chiefs have taken oaths of loyalty to the Emperor. They are now reported to be happily engaged in raiding bands of French Somalis, who are stated to have crossed into Ethiopia with the object of stealing cattle, sheep and goats, which they hope to sell to the Italian troops.

Diredawa is now an armed camp, swarming with thousands of soldiers. It is being used as a concentration point for troops arriving from Western Ethiopia. Fifteen hundred local women have volunteered to serve at the front.

UNWORTHY ACT OF ITALY

HAILE SELASSIE'S BROADCAST

Haile Selassie, Emperor of Ethiopia, broadcast a message to Europe last night. The Emperor spoke in French. At the conclusion an English translation was given.

The Emperor spoke about the incident at Wal Wal and said it was in itself a commonplace incident, which, under the general principles of the Covenant of the League of Nations and the special provisions of the Italo-Ethiopian Treaty of 1928, should have had an immediate and rapid arbitral solution.

The decision of the arbitrators, including two Italians, had been unanimous, and was that neither Ethiopia nor Italy could be held responsible for this incident. Thus the Italian demand, which was intended to make it appear that the Ethiopian Government was culpable of aggression at Wal Wal, was now definitely set aside and this excuse for an Italian-Ethiopian war has disappeared.

PART OF ETHIOPIA

Italy had always obstinately refused to submit to arbitration the question of whether Wal Wal belonged to Ethiopia or Italy. Such arbitration would show that Wal Wal was an integral part of the Ethiopian Empire, even if this did not appear from the official map published by the Italian Minister of the Colonies.

Now that the pretext of Wal Wal had vanished, in order to make war on Ethiopia, Italy, after having obtained from the Powers their refusal to permit Ethiopia to purchase armaments and munitions which Ethiopia did not manufacture and which were necessary for her defence, sought to discredit the Ethiopian people and their Government before world opinion by characterising them as a barbarous people whom it was necessary to civilise.

The attitude of Italy would be judged by history, which would show whether Italy was a nation which was the incarnation of civilisation by making war on a pacific people, previously disarmed, and who had placed their confidence in the perpetual peace and friendship which that civilised nation had solemnly given by the treaty made on her own initiative seven years before.

"FRIENDSHIP"

Italy now sought to justify the unworthy act which she was preparing to commit against the Ethiopian people. To this end, instead of replying to the legal argument which demonstrated the violation of Ethiopian territory, the Government of Rome presented at the last moment to the Council of the League a documentation against the Ethiopian people, patiently assembled by numerous agents distributed throughout Ethiopia, while the Italian diplomatic representative accredited to Ethiopia had given the most solemn assurances of unfailing friendship.

"The Ethiopian people are greatly attached to peace, but they are at the same time animated by a great love of country. Whatever the state of disarmament in which they find themselves through the diplomatic manœuvres of Italy, they will know how to oppose every aggression. All Ethiopian peasants are jealous of their independence and they know how to use the sword and the spear as well as the plough when it is a question of defending the lands they cultivate."

Mr. Stephen Elgar Spink, the 24 years old son of Mr. Samuel Spink, the art dealer and jeweller, of King street, London, W., whose home is at Purley Down, Surrey, was found shot dead yesterday at the foot of a cliff at Trevail, near St. Ives, Cornwall. There was a bullet wound over the left eye. Near his body a gun was found.

SMUGGLING AT THE BORDER

GREYHOUNDS AND CATTLE

HEAVY COST OF PREVENTION

THE increased cost of preventing smuggling on the Northern Ireland frontier was referred to during the evidence given by Sir Evelyn Murray, Chairman of the Board of Customs and Excise, before the Committee of Public Accounts in London.

A Blue Book containing this evidence, published yesterday, reveals that Sir Evelyn stated that an over expenditure of £10,912 was largely due to smuggling on the Irish boundary because of the Irish special duties. There were 383 in 1933-34.

BIG STAFF NECESSARY

Sir George Gillett—Do you have a largely increased cost for the number of men you have to employ along that frontier?—Yes; we have had to employ a considerable additional staff.

Is it practically all cattle smuggling, or are there other things as well?—On the Irish boundary it is almost entirely cattle smuggling and a few greyhounds.

I suppose there were a large number you were never able to arrest?—Probably; but we have got increased staffs there, and I think we have got on the top of it now.

Sir Vivian Henderson—Did you say that smuggling on the Irish frontier included greyhounds?—There have been a few.

Are greyhounds dutiable?—If they come out of the Free State, yes.

BLUE SHIRTS FOR AFRICA

REPORTED OFFER TO ITALY

An official of General O'Duffy's Blue Shirt movement yesterday declined to make any comment on the report of his leader's announcement that one thousand Irish Blue Shirts had volunteered to go to East Africa to fight against Ethiopia.

According to the report, General O'Duffy is stated to have said at a secret conference in connection with the International Fascist Congress at Geneva, that the Blue Shirts had asked the honour of going to Abyssinia to fight side by side with the Italian troops because "they were conscious that Italy's struggle was a struggle of civilisation against barbarism."

The official alluded to informed an Irish Times reporter that he did not wish to comment on the report until he had seen the General himself.

General O'Duffy's deeper immersion into internationalist Fascist activities is creating quite a good deal of comment of a diverse character among his own followers (writes our Political Correspndent). Several of the local leaders have approached public men who are known to be in sympathy with the movement, and have asked for their opinion as to the attitude adopted by the General. It is felt that his energies could be employed better at home, where all his organising abilities may be necessary to keep his organisation alive.

NOT OUR CONCERN

MR. CRONIN'S VIEW

"I want it to be clearly understood that when we appealed to our young men and women to join the Blue Shirts, we did so in defence of the rights of the Irish people. We have no intention of allowing them to be used for any other purpose. I make mention of that because there are certain people in this country who are at present endeavouring to induce the Blue Shirts to embark on a reckless and suicidal policy, which is not, or should not, be any concern of this country."

These remarks were made last night in Dun Laoghaire Town Hall, in the course of an address by Mr. J. Cronin, Director-General of the League of Youth, on the occasion of a dance by the members of the Dun Laoghaire branch of the organisation. Urging them to organise, he stated that the tragedies of the past were largely due to the mis-directed enthusiasm of youth. If youthful vigour, he said, was not provided with a constructive outlet, then it would be used for disruptive and destructive purposes.

FROM "THE TIMES"

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT.)

A DECISIVE SPEECH

In a leading article to-day The Times observes:—The two speeches of Sir Samuel Hoare and M. Laval, delivered to the Assembly on Wednesday and yesterday, together enlarge the authority of the League and heighten the sense of security in Europe. The French Prime Minister said himself that the speech of the British Foreign Secretary marked an important date in the League's annals, and the reception given to M. Laval's own speech showed that the assembled nations of the world considered that it was decisive. The British speech gave a lead, the French speech proved what was already believed, that the same stand would be taken by the one important member-State, about whose policy any ambiguity might still have been supposed to persist.

For reasons which can be perfectly well understood, French policy had been unwilling to commit itself openly in advance, but yesterday the slightest trace of doubt was removed. M. Laval came out for the Covenant, the whole Covenant, and nothing but the Covenant. For France, he said, it was the international law. At this moment, when responsible statesmen know well that their words are guarantees of action if the position they are bound to envisage should arise, they, nevertheless, pledge themselves to make of the League a live force in international affairs. The enthusiastic support of French and British policy by other nations of the League means that henceforth deliberate and just judgment in an international dispute is to be clothed with authority, and that any nation which transgresses the new charter of international relationship must reckon with this fact. This resurgence of the League's moral and practical authority is all the more dramatic in coming at the moment when it had sunk to so low an ebb.

Unless Signor Mussolini has lost all sense of proportion, proceeds The Times, the firm words of M. Laval, whose eagerness to reach an agreement with him has been so obviously profound and sincere, should convince the Italian Dictator that far more is to be gained for his country by timely collaboration with Great Britain and France than by an insensate policy which they can have no choice but to oppose.

An ordination of one priest and two deacons will be administered by the Archbishop of Dublin in Christ Church, Bray, to-morrow at 11.30 a.m. The preacher will be the Venerable the Archdeacon of Dublin.

TO-DAY'S CAR RACE

HIGH SPEEDS EXPECTED

PHŒNIX PARK FIELD OF 33

GRAND PRIX REVIVAL PRESAGED

FROM OUR MOTORING CORRESPONDENT.

TO-DAY'S motor car race in the Phœnix Park, Dublin, is believed to presage the fulfilment of the ideal of those who four years ago ran the first ..d race to be organised in these islands except by national clubs — the revival of the Irish International Grand Prix.

L. FONTES.

Never before has the Dublin public had the opportunity of seeing a race like that to be held to-day. The field of thirty-three is all that could be desired in point of size. In quality it is superior to any previously seen in this country. Whereas the old Grand Prix races—and the Tourist Trophy events—included only standard sports cars, to-day's race has attracted the entries of real racing machines such as take part in Continental events and in Brooklands track competitions.

FAST CARS

The fastest car ever seen in the Irish Grand Prix was Earl Howe's Mercedes-Benz. The fastest car ever seen in the T.T. was the Alfa-Romeo of the late Sir Henry Birkin. There are at least three cars in to-day's race which would leave both those machines far behind. They are Austin Dobson's Maserati, Luis Fontes' Alfa Romeo and E. K. Rayson's Bugatti.

Speed records are certain to be broken in all classes (with possibly one exception). The lap records should be raised to 96 m.p.h. in the big class, to 89 m.p.h. in the 1,100 c.c. class, and to 88 m.p.h. in the 750 c.c. class.

The small car class is particularly attractive with three of the single-seater supercharged racing M.G. Midgets, a Brooklands single-seater Austin, one of the fast T.T. type supercharged Austins and several unsupercharged machines.

The only scratchings from the 36 entries accepted at the final closing date are: The Singers of Norman Black and F. S. Barnes, which were damaged in the T.T. race, and D. C. MacLachlan's Riley, which is not ready.

THE DRIVERS

Not only is the quality of the cars high, the drivers are men of reputation. The records of the more notable are briefly as follow:—

Luis Fontes, International Trophy, Le Mans and Limerick winner.

Austin Dobson, fastest laps at Skerries, Tallaght, and in the Park last year; Brooklands and T.T. competitor.

E. K. Rayson, well-known Brooklands and continental driver.

R. E. Tongue, third in Senior race last year; considerable continental experience.

M. J. Hynes, winner of Wakefield Trophy last year; one of the most experienced Irish drivers.

W. J. Kavanagh, joint-holder of 750 c.c. lap record; considerable Irish experience.

Frank O'Boyle, won Wakefield Trophy, 1933.

I. F. Connell, Donington and Brooklands experience.

M. H. Fleming, County Down Trophy winner.

W. T. McCalla, fastest at Bray, 1934 and 1935; won County Down Trophy, 1934.

F. H. ffrench Davis, led for 15 laps in this year's T.T.; second in County Down Trophy.

P. Dwyer, drove at Bray, Bangor and Limerick.

C. H. W. Manders, international reputation as motor cyclist; has driven in several car races.

R. B. S. Le Fanu, winner at Bray, 1934.

Stanley Woods, world's greatest motor cyclist.

T. O'Shaughnessy, Flight-Lieutenant L. R. Briggs and F. Pearson, regular competitors in Irish races.

J. Carr, drove and finished at Le Mans.

G. F. A. Manby Colegrave, won Junior race last year; fastest lap at Bray; T.T. and Brooklands driver.

Charles Goodacre, has driven in Austins in several important races.

W. R. Baird, regular T.T. driver; has competed at Donington, Southport and most Irish meetings.

D. Yule, regular competitor with hill climb successes.

Most of the other competitors have competed in one or more races either in this country or in England.

AN ADVENTURE

Manby Colegrave, who is regarded as having a particularly good chance in to-day's race, was sitting in the train at Euston about to start his journey to Ireland when he found he had left his triptyque in his private car, which his chauffeur already had driven away from the station. He had to chase after his triptyque, missed the train, and left for Ireland by air next morning. When his 'plane got to Dublin the fog was so thick that it had to return to Liverpool after circling over the city for an hour and a half. Later in the day it made the trip to this country in time for Manby Colegrave to take part in Thursday's practising.

To-day's show is absolutely free, but spectators can help towards bearing the cost of it by buying a programme. As a matter of fact it will be difficult to follow the progress of the race without one.

By a mistake the three P-type Midgets of M. H. Fleming, R. Marsh and G. A. Mangan are shown in the official programme with fifteen instead of fourteen credit laps.

CELTIC REVIVAL IN IRELAND

WELSH PAPER'S CRITICISM

INDIGNANT CELTS AT CARDIFF

POLITICAL PRESSURE DENIED

FROM OUR REPORTER.

CARDIFF, Friday.

HAS Irish been forced down the throats of the people of the Irish Free State by their Governments? This suggestion was the subject of some lively comment at to-day's session of the Celtic Congress in University College here.

Irish delegates were indignant at an allusion to their country in the leading article of the Western Mail, the Welsh national newspaper, this morning.

"The suggestion that Celts should now look to Ireland for leadership," said the article, "is subject to the criticism that the Celtic revival in that country is due not to popular demand, but to political pressure and compulsion."

At the outset of the session Professor Agnes O'Farrelly, speaking of the leader, said that it was absolutely incorrect for the Western Mail to suggest that the Irish renaissance movement was subsequent to the political movement, because, in fact, it was anterior to it. Further, the Celtic Congress was not an antiquarian body, but a live force in the world of to-day.

WELSH HOME RULE

Mr. G. Jones, Cardiff, said: "That is a civilised paper in a civilised country; that is the sort of thing we Welsh Nationalists have to put up with—this working against the language in Wales by imperial institutions."

In regard to Celticism among students he said: "The Welsh Universities have to compete with the 'directly purposeful' English Universities in preparing students for the professions," and continued: "This spirit of fear among the people, and their anxiety about keeping jobs is paralysing the Nationalist movement in Wales to-day. The cure for this anti-Welsh activity is Home Rule for Wales."

COMPULSION DENIED

Miss Roisin Walsh, Chief Librarian, City of Dublin Public Libraries, before reading her paper on: "The Place of Libraries in the Revival of the Language," also referred to the Welsh paper's criticism. "It is nonsense to talk about the Government forcing the Irish language down our throats," she said. "Old people, and people who are fixed and ossified in their ideas, find difficulty in learning Irish, but the young people are enthusiastic and are learning it extraordinarily well."

Miss Walsh added that they might never have the people speaking the pure Irish of Professor O'Maille, who came from an Irish-speaking district, and a good many purists regretted the introduction of certain new words into the language.

A LIBRARY INQUIRY

In regard to the relations between Free State libraries and the Government, an important announcement was made by Miss Walsh before reading her paper.

"We are going to have very soon an inter-departmental inquiry into the position and work of public libraries, and I hope great doings will come of that," she said.

She explained that libraries are at present under the control of the Department of Local Government, who, however, did not interfere in the administration of the libraries. There was no present official connection between the libraries, the schools or the Department of Education.

GREATER DUBLIN TRIBUNAL

OBJECTIONS TO JOINT CONTROL

"CITY A MILCH COW FOR RURAL AREAS"

THERE was no case to be made out for joint control of drainage or water services for Dublin City and County, said Mr Ignatius J. Rice, who at present is Deputy City Manager, in the course of further evidence on behalf of the Dublin Corporation, given to the Greater Dublin Tribunal in the hall of the Incorporated Law Society, Four Courts, Dublin, yesterday. The present system, he said, worked well, and the suggested proposal would mean only the creation of a new administrative authority to carry out at increased cost, and to the detriment of the city, services which are adequately dealt with under the present arrangement.

Mr. Gavan Duffy, K.C., Chairman of the Tribunal, presided, and the other members—Mr. T. C. Courtney, M.E., and Mr. R. J. Baker—were present.

Mr. Albert E. Wood, K.C., Mr. Vincent Rice, K.C., and Mr. Gerard T. Burke (instructed by Mr Ignatius J. Rice, Law Agent) appeared for the Dublin Corporation; Mr. E. J. Kelly, K.C., and Mr. Frank Monks (instructed by Mr. E. J. Kenny) for the Dun Laoghaire Borough Council; Mr. Geoghegan, K.C., and Mr. W. G. Fallon (instructed by Mr. T. Farly) for the Dublin County Council; and Mr. William Hunter, solicitor (Messrs. Hunter and Burland) for Howth Urban Council.

"MILCH COW"

Resuming his evidence, Mr. Ignatius J. Rice said that such a proposal as a joint board for services such as drainage, water, etc., as applied to Dublin, did not take into account the facts of the case. It was evidently suggested on the model of two neighbouring municipalities of approximately equal status and resources, such as there are in the industrial districts in England, where, in many cases, two large municipalities blend into each other. In such cases it was natural that two such bodies should combine to maintain a common drainage, water, or other service. As an instance in this country, it might be mentioned that the former Rathmines and Pembroke Urban District Councils combined for a joint drainage scheme. There was no such justification for a joint board to control such services in regard to Dublin, where the adjoining local authorities are a capital city and a rural area governed by a County Council. The resources of the two bodies were not comparable. The city, under such an arrangement, would become the milch cow for the rural areas. If there were a proposal to set up an independent drainage system and water supply for the county area, then it might be suggested that there should be a joint scheme under a joint board, but no such proposed new schemes were contemplated. Further, the capital money for the existing main drainage and water systems was found by the city, and the control of these services should be left in the hands of the people who had raised the money. Where, by reason of building development, it had become necessary to give drainage and water services in areas adjoining the city, in many cases amicable arrangements had been made between the Corporation and the adjoining county authority for the extension of the city services to such areas. There were in existence nine legal agreements between the county authorities and the Corporation for the drainage into the system of adjoining rural areas, subject to the payment to the Corporation by the county authority of a special rate on the valuation of the property so drained.

WATER SUPPLY

In regard to the supply of water the Corporation was a statutory undertaker for the county area, and supplied water to all the adjoining areas. With the construction of the proposed reservoir at Poulaphouca, the Corporation would have adequate resources to supply the adjoining areas on the present basis.

Answering questions by Mr. Geoghegan, the witness said that the relations between the Corporation and the County Council were cordial, and the administration of Grangegorman Mental Hospital, on the Board of which both bodies were represented, generally had been smooth, but his recollection was that occasionally there was an inclination on the part of the country men to combine against the city men. (Laughter.) The main reason why the Corporation was seeking to acquire 66 acres of land at Ballyfermot was that they wanted to erect a tuberculosis hospital there, to be controlled by the Corporation, which would be prepared to give accommodation to the County Dublin on terms. So far as his knowledge extended, no drainage or water was provided by the County Council for the Crooksling institution, which was the property of the Corporation. The Corporation provided its own water supply and its own drains. The Corporation had an agreement to provide a certain quantity of water to Finglas.

Regarding the condition of the roads in County Dublin, the witness said that he would not contradict the statement that they were first-class.

Questioned by Mr. Kelly, he said that the Dublin Corporation had informed the Dun Laoghaire Borough Corporation that they would be prepared to withdraw their opposition to Dun Laoghaire Corporation's demand for an extension of their boundary if they got a fair price for the water supplied to them.

DUN LAOGHAIRE AGREEMENT

As an official, and as the solicitor who was acting for one of the parties in the negotiations about the withdrawal of opposition and the price of water, he resented the attitude of Dun Laoghaire, it having done nothing to carry out its part of the proposed agreement. His complaint was, not that the Dublin Corporation was losing money owing to the failure of Dun Laoghaire to complete the draft agreement, but that it was losing money owing to its failure to get power to make Dun Laoghaire pay 6d. per thousand gallons of water.

In reply to the Chairman, the witness said that the Tribunal might take it that the evidence that he had given there represented the views of the City Manager, submitted to and approved by the General Purposes Committee of the Corporation, which consisted of the whole Corporation.

He agreed that it would not be fair for the Corporation to abuse an area for making improvements, but said that it was reasonable to complain of having to make large expenditures to bring added areas up to the standard of the city. For fifty or sixty years the city had clamoured for the inclusion of Rathmines and Pembroke in the city boundary, and the Corporation sitll wanted Rathmines and Pembroke. Nobody suggested that Rathmines or Pembroke had been thrust upon the Corporation against the will of the Corporation.

The Tribunal adjourned until 11 o'clock on Monday, 23rd inst.

PORTORA'S NEW HEADMASTER

A DUBLIN GRADUATE

The Bishop of Clogher (Dr. Macmanaway) presided at a meeting of the Governors of Portora Royal School, Enniskillen, yesterday, when, on the motion of the Earl of Belmore, seconded by Mr. E. M. Copeland Trimble, J.P., Mr. Ian Malcolm Stuart, M.A., was unanimously elected as Headmaster in succession to the retiring Headmaster, the Rev. E. G. Seale, M.A.

Mr. Seale's resignation is much regretted, not only by the members of the Board, but by the boys of the school and their parents, and by the old boys. He will, however, remain in office until December next, so that the new year may be opened under the new Headmaster. Mr. Seale has been for the past eighteen years Headmaster of Portora. Under him the old school reached the peak of its prosperity. For upwards of ten years there has been no vacancy in the school, and there has been a "waiting list." During his tenure of office the Board spent £23,000 in improving the school buildings and the boarding establishment and in the building of the preparatory school, which it is hoped to open at the end of the present term.

The new Headmaster is an Irishman of Scottish lineage. He is the only son of the late Mr W. H. Stuart, Estates Commissioner for Ireland (1911-21), and is aged 33. He was educated at Malvern College, where he was college prefect, was heavy-weight boxing champion, and member of the shooting VIII. He graduated in Trinity College, Dublin, in 1924, with a Moderatorship in History and Political Science, and obtained his Master of Arts degree in 1931. He was appointed Assistant Master of St. Paul's School in 1925, and in 1927 went to Harrow. In 1931 he became Joint Head of Marcy's, Chancery lane, and published four works for use in schools. In 1933 he was appointed Headmaster of Beaminster Grammar School, Dorset, with the boarding-house of 50 boys.

Messrs. Harty and Bredin, Great Southern Railway Co., met representatives of the various engineering unions at Inchicore Works yesterday for the purpose of discussing the wages and conditions of railway shopmen.

The unions have made a claim upon the company for the restoration of the 10 per cent. deduction from engineering workers' wages, which has been in operation for some years past.

The conference agreed that the company's case against any alteration in the present rates would be made in writing and that the Engineering Trades Group in the Dublin Trade Union Council would then consider the position.

STICKING TO CONCESSION

MR. RICKETT IN ENGLAND

"I have the finest concession the world has seen for some time, and I am very proud to have pulled it off. I wish I could have done it in England. I am an Englishman of the deepest dye. I have bought this concession in Abyssinia, and I am going to stick to it, lock, stock and barrel."

Mr. F. W. Rickett, the English financier who obtained the famous oil concession in Abyssinia, made this statement to a reporter last night when he landed at Croydon Aerodrome, after flying from Rotterdam.

"All the arrangements for the concession were made before the dispute between Italy and Abyssinia started, and it does not affect my plans in the slightest," said Mr. Rickett.

Asked whether he knew that his action gave great anxiety to two countries, Mr. Rickett replied with emphasis: "My action should not have caused anxiety to any Government. I am not a bit interested in politics, and have not been approached by any Government."

Mr. Rickett added that he was not in touch with the Italian Government. He laughed aside a suggestion that he might see Signor Mussolini, and said that the American Legation knew no more than any other Legation about his plans.

LARCENIES IN MANY COUNTIES

TWO CHURCHES ROBBED

STRIKING STATEMENT TO GUARDS

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

ENNIS, Friday.

AT Ennis District Court to-day, Sydney Boyd and Patrick Shinners, no fixed abode, were charged with breaking into the Catholic church at Eglish, Offaly, and stealing altar wine and keys; the larceny of a bicycle from John Meara, Banager; breaking into the golf club pavilion at Rossglass, Ballinasloe, and stealing a pair of shoes.

Superintendent Delaney, of Birr, gave evidence that Shinners made and signed a statement admitting the offences.

SERIES OF ROBBERIES

In Eglish Chapel, he said, he drank the altar wine, but did not remember taking any of the keys. He took a bicycle from outside the schoolhouse in Rath, and abandoned the bicycle at Abbeyville by throwing it into a pond. In June, 1935, he broke into a house on the Ballinasloe golf links and took a pair of shoes and a coat. Accompanied by Sydney Boyd, they took a bicycle at Curnaghare, Co. Dublin, on 10th August, and made an abortive attempt to break into a store owned by a man named Bolger. At Ratoath they took a lady's racing bicycle, and from there went to Maynooth, Bodenstown and Timahee Bog (Co. Kildare). After breaking into Campstown Stores, they travelled to Mountmellick with a supply of tobacco, cigarettes, groceries, flash lamps, batteries, a couple of fountain pens and other articles. At the Protestant church at Dunamase they stole a marquee, and then broke into the house of Miss Byrne, between Timahoe (Leix) and Maryborough, from which they took £6 10s., a purse, and an old silver watch and a chain. They continued their journey via Ballyroan, Ballinakill, Allanagh railway station, Templemore and Dunkerrin, where they changed Miss Byrne's five-pound note and bought two shirts. Then they travelled to Nenagh and Ardcroney, County Tipperary.

A REVOLVER

At the latter village they removed a pane of glass from a shop window, entered, and took cigarettes, groceries and money. Subsequently they crossed the Shannon by row-boat to Meelick, County Clare, and proceeded through various villages in East Clare until they arrived at Kilbane, near Broadford. On their way they met a man named Martin Fahy who had been in prison with Sydney Boyd some years ago, and from him they bought a Webley revolver for £1. Boyd sold a bicycle to a shopkeeper in Kilbane for 35s. After a visit to Bridgetown they proceeded to Killaloe, where they entered a local stores and took money, pipes, tobacco, cigarettes and groceries. They then left for O'Callaghan's Mills, and on their way from that place to Gort were arrested.

District Justice Gleeson remanded the prisoners in custody for a further week, at the end of which period other charges will be preferred against them.

DUBLIN ACCIDENTS

GIRL KILLED AT MARINO

Injuries which resulted in her death were received by Miss Maureen Finnegan (18), Upper Dorset street, Dublin, who was admitted to Jervis Street Hospital last night following a collision between her push bicycle and a motor lorry at the junction of Marino Mart and the Malahide road.

Miss Finnegan sustained a fractured skull and severe internal injuries, and she succumbed a short time after being brought to the hospital by the Fire Brigade ambulance.

WOMAN KNOCKED DOWN

An elderly woman named Mrs. Byrne, Frankford Garden, Ranelagh, is stated to have received serious injuries last night when, while crossing the thoroughfare at Sandford road, Dublin, she was struck and knocked down by a motor vehicle. She was taken by the ambulance to the Meath Hospital, where she lies in an unconscious condition.

PRIEST'S INJURIES

It was ascertained yesterday that the Rev. Father Masterson, Dublin, whose motor car collided with a tram standard at Stephen's Green early yesterday morning, and was badly damaged—Father Masterson being extensively cut about the head—was discharged from Mercer's Hospital after treatment.

One wound in his head received several stitches, and he lost a considerable quantity of blood, a pool of which had formed on the roadway where the accident occurred. It is understood that his car skidded into the post.

PHOTOGRAPHER'S FALL

While taking photographs at Ballsbridge yesterday evening, James Merriman (48), of 51 Parnell street, Dublin, fell from a roof, fifteen feet high, and sustained injuries to his head and back. He was taken by the Brigade ambulance to Baggot Street Hospital, where he was detained for treatment.

BOMBING INDIAN OUTLAWS

HUMANE WAY TO MAINTAIN ORDER

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

SIMLA, Friday.

A defence of bombing as the most humane means of maintaining order on the Indian frontier was made on behalf of the Indian Government when this matter was debated in the Legislative Assembly. In the division which followed a resolution condemning such bombing was carried against the Government by 67 votes against 44, this being the first Government defeat of the session.

The recent trouble with the Upper Mohmands on the Peshawar district frontier was described by the acting Foreign Secretary, Mr. Acheson, who pointed out that these tribesmen had broken their agreement, and had harboured outlaws who had murdeerd British Indian subjects, including women and a child.

No Government could tolerate this state of affairs, he declared, and the impending military expedition was an obligation on the Government's part towards the friendly tribes whom they were pledged to protect against incursions of armed men from beyond the protected areas.

WICKLOW GOLD MINING INQUIRY

PROCEDURE IN MINISTRY

MR. LEMASS TO GIVE EVIDENCE

WHEN the Select Committee of the Dail to inquire into the demise of gold-mining rights in County Wicklow met yesterday morning. Those present were: Mr. J. Coburn, Mr. F. FitzGerald-Kenney, Mr. H. Flinn, Mr. J. Good, Mr. T. P. Dowdall and Mr. O. Traynor.

Mr. E. St. J. Lyburn, Economic Geologist to the Department of Industry and Commerce, resumed his evidence, and, in reply to Mr. FitzGerald-Kenney, said that he had suggested the terms of the lease to Mr. Ferguson. The condition that four men should be regularly employed was inserted in order to try and enforce that there would be a certain amount of work done. Broadly speaking, in such leases this condition was not strictly enforced.

Mr. FitzGerald-Kenney—Can you remember whether you mentioned to Mr. Ferguson that this covenant should not be enforced?

Witness—No, I never mentioned it.

In reply to the Chairman (Mr. Norton), witness said that he had been consulted twice in all about the granting of the lease. He had not to make any report, as it was necessary for him to go down to inspect the property. He knew it well.

Chairman—Do you think you were adequately consulted?—I do.

You do not think you were slighted or passed over?—Not at all.

Do you feel that there was any reluctance to use your expert knowledge?—No.

Do you feel it was adequately used in this instance?—Certainly.

THE ATMOSPHERE

Mr. Dowdall—You were not influenced by any atmosphere radiating from any source?—Certainly not.

Mr. Dowdall—And the lease was granted on the same terms that were in practice when this country was under the British?—Yes, the same terms.

Mr. Flinn asked if witness could suggest any improvement on the part of the Government in dealing with a proposition of the kind.

Witness said that the Government could, of course, put in a boring plant on the property and see what it was worth, but he doubted very much if they were going to get much practical results, whereas the system of charging a royalty on stuff got by private enterprise was the best way of handling the matter. A small boring plant, with a couple of lads to work it, doing a foot a day or so, would cost about £200.

Mr. J. Leydon, Secretary of the Department of Industry and Commerce, in reply to the Chairman, said that he had read the paragraph of the letter written to the Department by Senator Comyn and Deputy Briscoe suggesting that Saorstat nationals should not be allowed to subscribe caapital to the new company, as the venture was highly speculative. That letter and the document accompanying it had been written at the request of an officer of the Department. He said that on the 25th April an interview took place between Senator Comyn and Deputy Briscoe and Mr. Clarke, an officer of the Department, and it was disclosed to Mr. Clarke that an agreement had been made. Senator Comyn and Deputy Briscoe were asked to explain why it was regarded as desirable that Free State capital should not be invested. He thought that the last paragraph in the letter might reasonably be related to that request for an explanation.

"A DUD PROPOSITION"

The Chairman asked if this thing were a good proposition would it not be considered desirable to have Saorstat capital.

Witness said that he would so consider it.

The Chairman asked if a paragraph in the letter suggested that shares should be rather subscribed for abroad than by their own people, did not that create the impression that the thing was exceedingly speculative.

Witness said that he would not take that impression from that letter. All mining ventures were speculative, and gold mining more so. There was a great deal of scepticism as to whether there was gold in County Wicklow. From that point of view, gold mining enterprise in County Wicklow could be regarded as more speculative than such an enterprise, say, in South Africa, which was a gold-mining country. He would not regard the paragraph as an indication that this was a dud proposition, as had been asserted. There was no direct action taken on the letter. Before the Department could take any final decision they should have the terms of the actual sub-lease before them. They were aware that friction had developed between the parties about the time that the agreement was concluded. It was not at all certain, as far as the Department was concerned, that the question of putting the agreement into operation would ever arise, and it was not at all unreasonable that they should wait for the result of the prospecting operations. Finally he might point out, he said, that there could be no question of raising money, and no harm could be done until the Minister consented to the giving of the sub-lease. He could not conceive any issue to the public without a sub-lease.

In reply to the chairman, the witness said that the Department felt they had complete control over the original lessees, and that this agreement did not transfer the ownership of the mining rights to anybody else.

As far as his department was concerned in that particular lease, they had administered the law as they had found it. There was nothing in the law to draw a distinction between a member of the Oireachtas and any member of the public, and it would be quite outside the function of the Department to draw such a distinction.

The Chairman—Although the obligation was imposed on the Minister to sign the lease, it was actually signed by the Secretary of the Department?—That is the case, but the general practice in which senior officers exercised certain functions and give certain decisions is a practice known to the Minister.

Mr. Leyden said that the fact that the persons to whom the concession was made were political associates of the Minister had nothing to do with the action of the Department.

Chairman—Would it be unfair to the officials of the Department to suggest that the granting of the licence had been expedited on account of Mr. Briscoe's and Senator Comyn's application?—It would be most unfair.

Would there be any grounds for saying that you facilitated these persons because they were political associates of the Minister?—No.

LAW THREATENED

Mr. Leyden said that he wished to draw attention to another file, which contained a letter to Messrs. Briscoe and Comyn, threatening legal proceedings if they did not submit returns in accordance with the Statute. He had issued that letter without consulting the Minister.

Chairman—Is there such a thing as atmosphere radiated from the Minister for Industry and Commerce?—The radiation of atmosphere or the occult conveyance of an impression is rather a metaphysical concept, and, to me, is somewhat illusive. I cannot relate it to anything that has come to my knowledge.

Do you believe there is anything in this atmosphere evidence?—Frankly, I do not.

In the issue of this lease there was no pressure of any kind brought to bear on you or on any other official?

Definitely not.

THE PROCEDURE

The witness was examined by Mr. FitzGerald-Kenney, who asked if the procedure in that case was similar to every other case.

Mr. Leyden—Obviously, the procedure is different in each case. Broadly speaking, the Department makes inquiries.

Is it your practice to grant leases without requiring expert advice?—It depends on the circumstances.

Mr. FitzGerald-Kenney asked if the Department ever made any inquiry as to whether the lessees hired the necessary expert advice.

Witness said that it was not necessary to ask that expert advice be employed, because they got the necessary information by way of the returns. This was also insisted upon in one of the covenants of the lease.

Mr. FitzGerald-Kenney—You waived this undertaking of theirs?

Witness—We did not waive it.

In further reply to Mr. FitzGerald-Kenney, witness said that he did not accept the proposition that the total sum available was £200 for paying the workmen and doing the boring. The Department could reasonably assume that in the case of lessees of a certain standing if further money was required it would be forthcoming.

Mr. FitzGerald-Kenney—But you have given that lease on the basis that £200 would be available?—that is the application they made. If they did not enforce the covenant issued afterwards they would run the risk of getting their lease cancelled.

Mr. FitzGerald-Kenney then asked the witness if he was aware of the practice initiated by the late Attorney-General, who advised that the Minister should give his personal fiat before any lease of State property was made.

Witness replied that such an opinion had been issued by the late Attorney-General, but he was not infallible. The Department's legal adviser did not hold that view, and in granting leases without the fiat of the Minister they were acting on the advice of the legal adviser of the Department.

Asked by Mr. FitzGerald-Kenney whether he knew of any other leases, mining or otherwise, granted direct to members of the Oireachtas, the witness said that he had been informed that there was one granted direct to Senator Comyn, and another, as quarry lease, granted to five lessees, of whom one was a member of the Dail.

In the afternoon Mr. John Good was elected to the chairmanship, and Mr. Leyden's examination was continued.

Chairman—What work did you anticipate that they would undertake?—Generally that they would prospect.

Chairman—That they would do prospecting?—That they would be responsible for carrying out the work.

Something was to be done under the lease. What had you in mind in regard to that?—It is set out in the lease.

When the application was received and you saw that it was proposed to spend £200 in prospecting, did you inquire into that sum and see if it would be sufficient for the work? We did not. We considered that it was not necessary.

NO SHARP PRACTICE

Mr. Geoghegan—Has there been any sharp practice, as it has been called, in connection with the prospecting lease at any stage?—Not so far as the Department is concerned.

Mr. Coburn (to witness)—You do not charge Mr. McGilligan with making allegations against officials in their personal capacity?

Witness—I don't charge Mr. McGilligan with anything.

Mr. Coburn—Questions were put to you by the Chairman in such a way as to lead one to think that Mr. McGilligan had made definite charges against your officials?—I don't think it's fair to ask me to interpret the Chairman's questions.

Mr. Coburn—The Chairman put questions to you that owing to the atmosphere radiating from the Minister all through the Department, you gave facilities to Senator Comyn and Deputy Briscoe that you would not give to others?

Witness—I don't remember the exact words, but what I did say, I think, was that I was not aware of any such atmosphere, and that the Department gave no facilities to Senator Comyn and Deputy Briscoe that would not be given to any other parties similarly situated.

Mr. Coburn asked witness whether he agreed that Mr. McGilligan was justified, on the facts known to him before and after the granting of the lease, in concluding that the officials of the Department granted to Senator Comyn and Deputy Briscoe facilities that would not have been given if they had not been political associates of the Minister.

Witness replied that he did not know how he could be expected to answer such a question. He could not prevent anybody from coming to any conclusion he liked.

Mr. Leyden said that he considered it his duty to submit to the Minister all questions of policy, questions on which he wanted a decision as to what would be most in accordance with policy, or matters which he considered required a decision of the Minister. "Personally I shoulder the responsibility of showing to the Minister papers that come before me."

"THAT IS YOUR GLOSS"

Mr. Coburn—This lease, in your opinion, was not a matter of importance—it was a mere trifle?—That is your gloss. I have not said that it was a mere trifle, and I do not accept your interpretation. I thought that it was not of sufficient importance to warrant my showing it to the Minister.

Mr. Coburn—Was it due to this radiation that we hear so much about?—I have denied the existence of the radiation.

Mr. Coburn—When this prospecting lease was issued to Messrs. Comyn and Briscoe it followed that after the two years they would get a sub-lease?—Not necessarily. If they complied with the conditions, and satisfied the Minister about financial and technical resources, there is a probability that a continuing lease would be given.

You are aware that there was an agreement between Messrs. Briscoe and Comyn and Messrs. Reisberget as a result of which a company was to be formed. Assuming that the combine issued an advertisement calling for shares in this company, would you publish the letter of April 25?—That is a hypothetical question. One cannot specify what the circumstances would be in two years time.

A MODEL LANDLORD

You made the suggestion that the Government should act as a model landlord. Am I to understand that that mentality prevailed when you were dealing with this application?—That question did not arise when we were dealing with this particular lease.

In further reply to Mr. FitzGerald-Kenney, witness said that he had no record that Senator Comyn and Deputy Briscoe had ever said that they had more than £200 for development work, but the Department was in a position to assume reasonably that if any more money were required it would be forthcoming. One of these parties was a man with many business interests and a member of the Dail, and the other was a member of the Senate, and had been interested in mining for years. Whilst £200 was mentioned in the application, the Department did not consider that the limit of their capital. The Department had power to void the lease if more capital was needed and was not spent.

The Committee adjourned until Tuesday, 24th September, at 3 o'clock, when, the Chairman announced, the Minister for Industry and Commerce would attend to give evidence.

The Chairman said that he had received a request from Senator Comyn and Deputy Briscoe to be provided with a copy of the evidence of Mr. McGilligan.

The application was granted.

THE "EMPTY CHAIRS" AT GENEVA

JAPAN'S INTEREST IN BRITISH POLICY

"TIMES" TELEGRAM.

TOKYO, Friday.

Sir Samuel Hoare's reference to "empty chairs" at the League, in his speech on Wednesday, has attracted attention here, but the Foreign Office considers that as it has not received any communication in the matter a stage has not been reached at which the Government can make any statement.

The Foreign Office spokesman noted with approval that the speech dealt not only with the means of preventing war, but with the deeper question—of the causes menacing peace in the unequal distribution of raw materials. In the present emergency, he said, the Japanese policy remains one of watchfulness, with a view to protecting her commercial interests.

Afterwards he entered the motor trade, and in 1912 was appointed agent for the Morris car.

LOOTING CHARGES

TEN BELFAST MEN ON TRIAL

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Friday.

At the Belfast Recorder's Court to-day, David Close, Douglas street; David Moore, Majestic street; William Devlin, Charlotte street; Richard M'Donald, Charlotte street, South; Robert Foote, Hunter street, and George Millar, Gaffikin street, were charged with breaking and entering the premises of Martin Coen, Ormeau road, Belfast, and stealing money, liquor and cigarettes.

David Close and Richard M'Donald pleaded guilty, and were put back. The others denied the charge, and Millar was discharged and Devlin was ordered to find bail for his appearance in another case.

Coen said that on the evening of July 14 he heard glass breaking and heard someone shout: "Bomb it." Looking through the window, witness saw a big crowd of people and the police coming along. Later he missed some wine, cigarettes and about 17s. out of the till—in all, about £2 10s. worth of drink, etc., in addition to the cash.

Head Constable Campbell said that when Close was arrested he said: "We are guilty. We are well caught." Moore said: "We are guilty. We were on the wrong way." On July 28 while on bail Moore made a statement to witness, which he signed, in which he implicated himself, Close, Foote and McDonald.

Foote, in his own defence, swore he was not near the looted premises on that Sunday.

The jury found Moore guilty of receiving and Foote not guilty. Moore was put back.

ANOTHER CHARGE

William Campbell and John Campbell, Lorton street; Daniel Hall, Diamond street, and James Hamilton, of Malvern street, each pleaded not guilty to breaking and entering the premises of Joseph O'Brien, Shankill road, on July 22, and stealing therefrom a quantity of liquor, etc.

Joseph O'Brien swore that he found the premises broken into, and about £9 12s. worth of liquor carried away. A basket and its contents of liquor, a stone jar, a set of dominoes, and a clock (now produced) were his property.

Constable Crozier said that at 3.30 in the morning he caught the two Campbells and Hall. In the men's possession he found the basket of liquor (produced), and a hammer, along with a set of odminoes. He asked the men where they got the stuff, and William Campbell said, "They were sitting here." Witness went to search the men, and the other Campbell and Hall produced bottles and tumblers from their pockets. Witness later returned to the public-house and met Hamilton on the Shankill road. He asked Hamilton to account for his movements. Hamilton said that he went with the other men to the "pub," and a lame man brought out the drink. "There was a man riding round on a bicycle looking out for the peelers," concluded the statement. Witness found that O'Brien's premises had been completely ransacked.

William Campbell said that they saw a basket and a jar in a gateway. The drink and dominoes were in the basket. Just as they were examining the basket the constable rode up on a bicycle.

Constable Crozier asked him to carry the basket to the barracks. Witness did so, and was turning out again when the constable told him to sit down on a form. He was then arrested and charged. The hammer, which Constable Crozier said came out of one of their pockets, was in the basket. It was untrue that he produced bottles or glasses from his pocket. It was his case that Constable Crozier was fabricating the case against him.

John Campbell said that when Constable Crozier asked his brother and witness to carry the basket to the barracks some of the bottles were falling off, and the constable asked them to put some of them in their pockets. Witness put a hammer in his pocket which had fallen out of the basket, and the constable knew he had done so. He denied taking part in looting the public-house.

The jury found the three prisoners guilty of receiving, and they were put back.

NO BICYCLE TAX

GOOD NEWS FOR BRITISH CYCLISTS

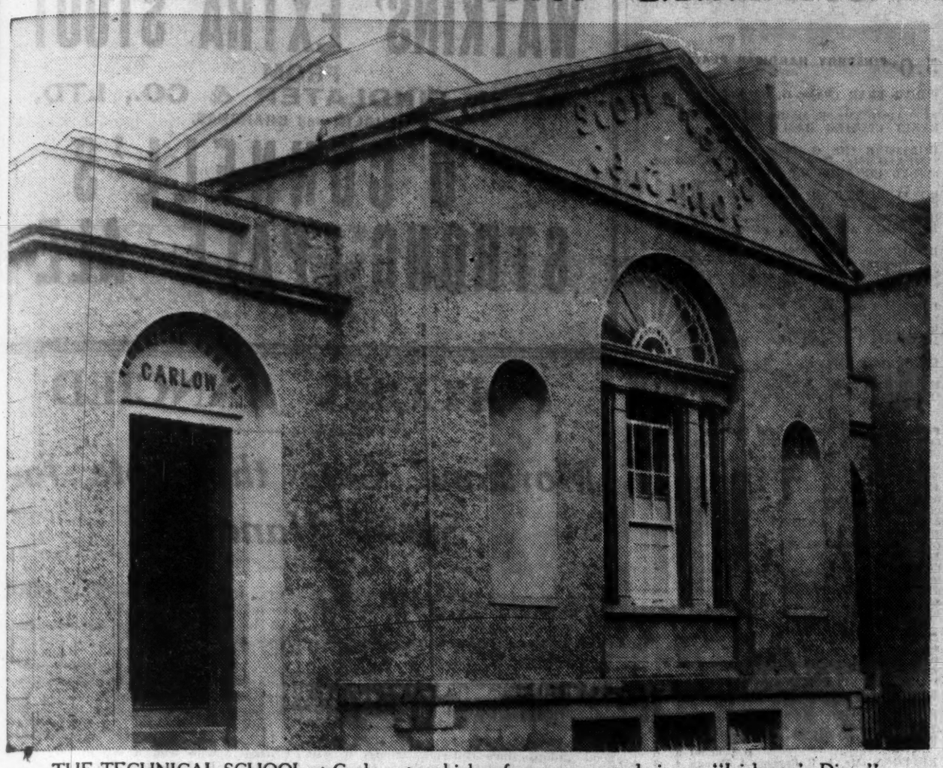

The British Ministry of Transport denies the report that the Government is considering the introduction of a tax on bicycles.

"We have no knowledge of any such proposal," an official at the Ministry said when asked by a representative of the British Cycle and Motor Cycle Manufacturers' and Traders' Union if there was any foundation for the statement.

Major H. R. Watling, Director of the Union, stated recently in an interview: "The subject of a proposed tax on bicycles keeps cropping up, though nobody, not even the most enthusiastic supporter of such a tax, has ever satisfactorily demonstrated that it could be put into operation. The idea is fundamentally impracticable.

"Some time ago I received from the principal private secretary to the Chancellor of the Exchequer a letter informing me that the Chancellor 'has not at any time even considered the question of taxing pedal cyclists; still less has he had any conference or discussion on the subject.'"

CARLOW'S LINK WITH G.B.S.

THE TECHNICAL SCHOOL at Carlow, to which reference was made in an "Irishman's Diary" recently. This building was built about 1791, and was originally the Carlow Assembly Rooms. It came eventually into possession ofthe family of Mr. George Bernard Shaw, the famous Irish dramatist, who later presented it to the late Catholic Bishop of Kildare and Leighlin, for conversion to its present purposes. In doing so, however, he expressed the wish that the "little façade that belongs to the best period of Irish architecture of the end of the eighteenth century" should be "retained for the sake of its decorative effect." Mr. Shaw is connected with Carlow through his mother's family, the Gourlays, and still has house property in the district.

STUDENT SHOT DEAD

IN PURSUIT OF PIGEONS

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

NEWRY, Friday.

William Walker, an eighteen-year-old student, of Banbridge, was fatally shot with the gun he was carrying through the hammer catching on the wire of a fence through which he was creeping in pursuit of pigeons on Thursday evening.

At an inquest held by Mr. R. S. Heron, Coroner for South Down, to-day, Dr. J. J. Connolly, Banbridge, said that death was due to shock and hæmorrhage, and the jury returned a verdict to this effect.

George Henry Walsh (18), "The Rock," Banbridge, said that the dead boy, witness's brother Frank, aged 13 years, and witness went shooting about 3.30 p.m., and witness had two guns in the car and cartridges, and witness gave Walker the loan of one of the guns. The deceased boy turned to get through the fence of a field where he saw some pigeons, and the next thing witness heard was a shot from the gun. On looking round witness saw the deceased boy fall under the fence. He was badly hurt and unconscious. The gun was lying behind him. Witness then sent for the doctor, but it was his opinion that Walker died immediately.

BRITISH SHIPPING PERIL

SERVICES THAT MAY BE WITHDRAWN

The Hon. Alexander Shaw, Chairman of the P. and O. Steamship Company, speaking at Liverpool last night at a dinner on board the new P. and O. liner Strathmore, prior to her sailing for speed trials, cited facts and figures illustrative of perils that beset British shipping.

He declared that unless some defence was afforded, British passenger and mail service on the line between New Zealand, Australia and San Francisco would be withdrawn within the next few months.

Much the same applied to the important British shipping link of Empire between Canada and Australia and New Zealand. Unless something was done to secure fairer conditions for British ships the sea trade between Australia and New Zealand would be wiped out on that run.

Mr. Shaw said that whereas before the War Great Britain owned about 40 per cent. of the world's tonnage, she now possessed less than 27 per cent.

BLACK DEVIL'S CUP

Ankaret Fails to Land the Odds in Park Hill Stakes

FROM OUR TRAVELLING CORRESPONDENT.

DONCASTER, Friday Night.

ALTHOUGH there were some great prices given this morning at the sales, like the 7,000 guineas for the colt by Trigo out of Reverentia, bred at the Cloghran Stud, the general proceedings were patchy. The Cloghran Stud, however, had a grand sale. Mrs. Glorney gave 10,000 guineas for two lots—one, a colt by Blandford from Madam Spearmint making 3,000 guineas, and 7,000 guineas for the Trigo colt. The under-bidder for this last lot was Trigo's owner, Mr. William Barnett.

Then Mr. Ernest Bellaney had a splendid sale, for, after one had gone for 300 guineas, he took 4,000 guineas for a colt by Fairway from Pallet Crag, Mr. H. Cottrill being the buyer, and 5,800 guineas for the colt by Bosworth from Mellowness that was knocked down to Miss Paget's trainer, Snow.

The Knockaney Stud had not as good a sale as in other years, and the demand for the yearlings of Mrs. J. J. Maher was also not so good.

A Magnificent Close

The racing closed magnificently, with the weather again splendid. Unfortunately, backers were smitten hard by the defeat of two odds-on chances, Ankaret in the Park Hill Stakes, and the Aga Khan's Barra Sahib in the last race of the meeting, the Doncaster Stakes. Long odds had been betted on both.

Sir Victor Sassoon's Solar Star had made the running in the Park Hill Stakes, but coming into the straight Fox Lair had headed her. Then Ankaret moved up and took second place; but whether she does not stay (and her trainer is sure she does) or what it was I do not know, but two furlongs from home she came from pulling double to nothing, and was beaten out of a place.

Donoghue continued to lead up the straight on Fox Lair, and she won easily, Solar Star coming again to get second place half a length behind, with Mildoria another length and a half away. Donoghue never had to move on the winner, who is a daughter of Foxlaw.

The odds laid on Black Devil in the Doncaster Cup were easily landed. Cecil made the running from the favourite, and then His Reverence took the second place off him, but he took up his old position again entering the straight.

When they were three furlongs from home Black Devil took it up, and won easily by two lengths and four lengths from the Manton pair, Cecil and Caracol. His Reverence, who did not stay, and the French horse, Denver II., who could never go with them, finished a long way behind.

Second Year in Succession

This was the second year in succession that Mr. William Woodward, the American owner, and his trainer, Captain Boyd-Rochfort, had won this race; for Alcazar credited them with it last year.

Mr. Woodward intends to sell Black Devil, as well as Bondsman and Fresh Fox, on the day of the Cambridgeshire. Black Devil, who is a grand individual by Sir Galahad, and is in the stud book, should make a good sire and would be a useful out-cross.

This trainer had another winner that seemed entirely unexpected—Bultoi, a colt by Bulger, who came out of the blue, after starting at 25 to 1, to beat the odds-on Barra Sahib. The idea of defeat for the latter was scouted, so well had he been going in his recent work, but he weakened when he had gone five furlongs, and the other beat him by two lengths.

A Promoted Plater

The other two-year-old event of the day was the Prince of Wales's Nursery, and this was won by a promoted plater, Bellrue, by Arcade, who was actually at the top of the handicap, yet stayed the eight furlongs out well to win by three-parts and a head from Ipsden and Tubis Topaze.

Not many of those in the field had pretensions to get the mile, and it was probably the worst field—for this good event—we have seen for years.

Carslake, riding a great finish, got up close home, to win the Town Moor Handicap on Mr. J. B. Joel's Snooker, who beat Over Coat by a head, with Hans Sachs, who was in front a hundred yards out, beaten three-parts of a length for second money. The favourite, Dignitary, was a complete failure, and the Beckhampton stable has gone through the week without a winner.

Out of a big field for the overnight selling race, the Danum Nursery, the best proved to be the filly by Ballyferis, from Come May, who, after losing lengths at the gate, was an easy winner from Flamonaise.

Selections

To-morrow we go southwards to the London meeting, Alexandra Park, where CHRISTMAS FARE should win the Hampstead Nursery, and POPCORN the September Handicap.

In the Muswell Plate the best should be FREE FARE.

At Ripon, which I am afraid will be visited by needy punters in search of the cross-Channel fare home, FLAXLEY TOM may get them out in the first race, the Wakeman Nursery.

The Ripley Plate should be won by ESCARGOT, and the Ripon Handicap by OUTLAW.

GALTEE MORE.

POPCORN FANCIED

Morstone Gets the Vote for Sprint Handicap

THE Alexandra Park executive stages its most interesting programme of the season to-day. Although the prizes are of the usual modest nature and there is no outstanding event, there will be plenty of runners and some keen betting races.

Popcorn, who picked up a 7lb. penalty when he won at Gatwick recently, is one of the most fancied competitors for the September Handicap, which is run over a mile and some odd yards. He has done some really good gallops since Gatwick, where, it will be recalled, he had five lengths to spare over the runner-up.

Apollo is another who has impressed my headquarters correspondent. He ran one of his best races this season against Bahram and others in the Two Thousand Guineas. Since then he has been competing in short distance races. He is not too good at the gate, otherwise I am sure he would have won at least a couple of good races this season.

Fille de Joie has won her last three races. As one of her successes was gained over this course and distance in August she has to be treated with respect. Her best performance was at Kempton, where she defeated La Gounda by three lengths at level weights.

Wonston did not shine in Voltus's race at Bath in July. He always does best when there is some give in the going. He will not find conditions to his liking here.

Birth Royal, a winner of three races in succession, still has room for improvement. She has stamina as well as a nice turn of speed. Lodge Park and Santa Marguerita are fancied to carry their light weights prominently. Although it was only in selling plate company that Santa Marguerita won on her last appearance, she is nicely treated here. I think will defy his penalty.

The Hampstead Nursery is over a mile and one hundred and fifty yards. One who will not be troubled by the distance is Reine d'Ete gelding. He won in a canter over a mile at Lewes last time out. He must have shown his connections some smart form over a distance of ground for he was backed down to 5 to 2 on. Even with a 7lb. penalty he has only a few pounds above bottom weight.

I have a favourable account of Last Crusader, who won a six furlong event at Gatwick. If Inspector Boutall can stay a mile he is weighted to win. He finished just more than four lengths in front of Reine d'Ete gelding over six furlongs at Kempton last month. They meet on the same terms here. As is by the good French-bred stayer, Brumeux, I shall take a chance with him.

Early Closing, Morstone, Royal Ulster, Sea Joy (last year's winner) and Duncan's Delight appear to be the pick of the weights for the Finsbury Handicap.

MORSTONE

was a close fourth to Ballinluig, Rosemary's Pet and Unlikely at Liverpool. If he can run as well here he should win I select him.

ROBBER CHIEF,

a reformed performer, should notch his third successive win in the Muswell Plate.

Racing in Yorkshire will be continued at Ripon, where fields look likely to be exceptionally strong I think the Autumn Handicap will be fought out by the top-weights—namely, Solitaire, Outlaw, Night Arrow and Tonyx.

NIGHT ARROW

improved on previous form this season when he won at Hamilton Park. I think he will prove a good bet.

MALLOW TO-DAY

Chance for Marjorie's Pet in the Cork Plate

Special Train—Kingsbridge, 10.40 a.m.

IN connection with the meeting at Mallow this afternoon a special train leaves Kingsbridge at 10.40 this morning which returns after racing. The programme is a varied one, with two years old catered for as well as steeplechasers and hurdlers. Hoar Abbey has a big impost in the Duhallow Plate, and may find some trouble to dispose of Maybird. He, however, is given the preference. Marjorie's Pet, who has been running consistently well without winning, seems to have a chance of capturing the Cork Plate, which is for maidens. Selections:—

Tote Double on Fourth and Fifth Races.

Duhallow Plate—Hoar Abbey.
Cork Plate—Marjorie's Pet.
Avondhu Plate—Southern Hue.
Fermoy Plate—Pat's Cottage.
Totalisator Plate—Solid Gold.

NEWMARKET HINTS FOR TO-DAY

For the Hampstead Nursery at Alexandra Park my vote goes to

who has pleased in her gallops over the distance of the race.

Lady Member is in good trim for the September Handicap, as is Fogbound, and the improving Popcorn will run well, but in this company should win.

APOLLO (next best)

Burlesque, Hot Bun and

NAVY BLUE

are under orders to contest the Harringay Selling Plate, and the last-named is the choice.

DONCASTER SALES

Half Brother to His Reverence Makes 7,000 Guineas

The concluding session of the Doncaster yearling sales was not so good as the corresponding session last year, due chiefly to the contingent sent up by Mrs. J. J. Maher failing to realise the usual prices. The death of Mr. Maher since the last sale was referred to by the auctioneer.

The morning session realised 44,500 guineas compared with 57,075 guineas last year. The aggregate for the whole sales was 274,897 guineas, against 298,280 guineas last year.

The Cloghran Stud batch aroused keen competition, and all sold for big prices, the best of them being a Trigo colt out of Reverentia, dam of His Reverence, a good winner in Ireland and the winner this year of the Great Cheshire Handicap and the Liverpool Silver Jubilee Cup. Mr. W. Barnett, the owner of Trigo, was keen to get this colt, but when he appeared to have got him Mrs. Corlette Glorney made a last bid of 7,000 guineas.

Immediately afterwards Mr. E. Bellaney's batch came up. The second was a nice-looking Fairway colt out of Pallet Crag, a Craig an Eran mare, whose ancestress, Ascenseur, was the dam of Waygood, who won the Irish Derby. The competition was fierce until Mr. H. Cottrill beat them all off at 4,000 guineas.

There was general admiration of the next, a Bosworth filly out of Mellowness, a Chaucer mare and dam of Meadow Rhu. Mr. Persse carried the bidding along, but D. Snow eventually got the filly for 5,800 guineas.

The best of those sent up by Mr. D. R. Browning was a brown Beresford filly out of Star in the East, and she was secured for Lord Ellesmere at 1,200 guineas, and the Beresford colt out of Portree was bought by Captain Boyd-Rochfort for 1,350 guineas.

Of the Comfey Stud lot, a Solario colt out of Rathcarron, dam of Hill Cat, was bought within his value by Jack Jarvis for 1,400 guineas, and Sir Malcolm McAlpine obtained a taking Fairway filly out of Silver Mist (dam of Silver Crest) for 1,450 guineas. Colonel Blake gave 1,200 guineas for a filly by Winalot—Snow Storm. Details:—

DEATH OF MR. M. D. PEACOCK

Mr. Matthew Dobson Peacock, the famous Yorkshire trainer, died at his home, Manor House, Middleham, yesterday. He was seventy-nine years of age. Although he had been ill for over a year, he still took an active interest in the training of his horses, and it was his custom whenever possible to watch them from his motor car at their work on Middleham Moor.

Three years ago he achieved the great ambition of his life by training 100 winners in one season. It was at Manchester on the last day of the season that he accomplished this feat, when Heronslea, the champion sprinter of the year, won the Ellesmere Handicap.

One of his disappointments was that he never trained the winner of a classic race. Possibly he would have won the Derby in 1931 with Gallini but for the colt falling lame after leaving his box. As it was, he ran remarkaby well in the race and finished fifth.

Six times he won the Northumberland Plate, three times the Manchester November Handicap and once the Chester Cup and the Great Yorkshire Handicap. One of the highlights of his career was when he won the Cambridgeshire in 1932 with Pullover, a 100 to 1 chance.

BOHEMIANS' TASK AT WATERFORD

PROMISE OF KEEN GAME AT CRUMLIN

ALTHOUGH none of the teams can claim full points from their matches to date, no fewer than five of the twelve have managed to avoid defeat—a fact which adds particular interest to the week-end matches in the Free State Shield.

Bohemians are one of the unbeaten sides, but they may find it difficult to maintain this record to-morrow, when they will be faced with a stiff task in opposing Waterford on the latter's ground. Waterford were unlucky not to have gained both points over Brideville, with whom they drew last week, and since then they have strengthened their forces by signing a cross-Channel centre-half whose identity has not yet been disclosed. P. Andrews resumes at centre-half for Bohemians; otherwise their team will be the same as that which drew with Drumcondra.

Cork, since their defeat in the opening week of the season, have been winning their matches by wide margins, and have the distinction of being the highest scoring team in the competition. They visit one of the unbeaten sides in St. James's Gate at Crumlin to-morrow, and, as the latter team invariably give a good account of themselves at home, the meeting should result in a really good game, from which Cork, if producing their recent form, may come out on top.

Shamrock Rovers have regained something of the form that made them an almost unbeatable team a season or so ago, and Reds United will need to show considerable improvement if they are to lower the Rovers' colours to-day.

Western followers will be provided with an attractive game in the meeting of Sligo Rovers—another of the unbeaten sides—and Dundalk at Sligo, where form points to a very even struggle. Drumcondra, with Quayle fit to resume at inside-right, seem reasonably sure of retaining their unbeaten record at Tolka Park, where they take on Dolphin, who have been the big disappointment of the season.

M.C.C. SIDE WINS BY TWO RUNS

SUTCLIFFE JUST MISSES THE CENTURY

A most successful Scarborough festival came to an end yesterday when the M.C.C. West Indies team beat Leveson-Gower's XI. by two runs. Sutcliffe brought distinction to the concluding day with his 96, made out of 232 in two hours and 40 minutes. So long as he stayed, Leveson-Gower's side seemed likely to win, but he was l.b.w. (new style) to Wyatt. He hit 15 fours, his hooking and driving being brilliant. Half the side were out for 142, but Brown helped Sutcliffe to add 60 in 28 minutes, and the total reached 253, with two wickets in hand. Paine had the good analysis of four for 36. Score:—

GOLF

HOLDER RETAINS TITLE

H. Thomson's Fine Play in Final of Irish Amateur

BY OUR GOLF CORRESPONDENT.

PORTRUSH, Friday Evening.

Hector Thomson, the twenty-one years old Scottish holder of the Irish Open Amateur Championship, successfully resisted the challenge of John McLean in the 36 holes final here to-day, winning by 5 and 4, and thus emphasising his victory in the final of the Scottish Championship, in which he beat the Hayston golfer by 2 and 1.

There was a period when it seemed possible that McLean would turn the tables on the champion. The first round ended with McLean leading by one hole, after more than holding his own, except in the driving. As a matter of fact, he played all his shots with all his old skill and crispness, and his putting was excellent, but he was undoubtedly handicapped by having to play the long seconds with wood, while the champion was taking the iron club. But in the evening McLean was definitely outplayed from the sixth hole. Up to the third it was anyone's match, so to speak, but when Thomson took a lead of two at the sixth McLean cracked completely, and when he turned for home five down the result was never in the least doubt.

FOUR UNDER FOURS

Thomson throughout the week played wonderfully fine golf. For the entire championship of nine rounds he was four under fours, but for this match he was four over, his opponent being nine over. He seemed to have reserved himself for the semi-final and final rounds; for certainly he played better yesterday and to-day than on any of the others. There has been no material difference in his play since he won the title last year at Portmarnock, except in his greater length from the tee. With none of his clubs was he often off the line, and his smooth, accurate putting, particularly in the second round, was one of the features of the match. In Thomson Britain has a brilliant golfer and a fighter, indeed, and it is a safe prediction to write that he is assured a place in next year's Walker Cup team, and a high one at that.

THE WINNING SHOT

The cracking of McLean when he was making such a grand fight was remarkable, but I would say that the winning shot of the championship was played at the first hole in the evening. The holder was laid a dead stymie, and had he failed to negotiate it when one down anything might have occurred, but he boldly lofted it, obviously much to the discomfiture of his opponent, who must have been pretty certain of the hole, seeing that his ball was about half a foot from the rim. It was one of the best strokes played in the match, and undoubtedly it had a bearing on subsequent events

THE FIRST ROUND

The first hole was halved in a very good four, but at the second Thomson played the better of two grand iron shots to the green, and holed from the back of the green for a 3. McLean, however, had the better of the irons to the third, Thomson being on the left. The champion was short with his approach putt, and they halved it in 4, after McLean had almost got down for a 3. Down wind they hit grand tee shots, but McLean failed to get home with wood, whereas Thomson was eight yards from the hole with a glorious iron. Another half resulted, but from the back of the fifth green Thomson required three putts, missing one of a yard and a half for a half. The match was thus all square, and playing a magnificent second to the sixth from a bad lie McLean got another half. McLean hit a very long tee shot to the dog-leg seventh, and, with Thomson in the bracken and unable to get the green with his second, the champion looked like losing the hole; but from a hard lie he ran up a perfect shot and snatched a half in 4.

McLEAN TAKES LEAD

They played the short eighth badly for 4's, but at the ninth Thomson's putt for a half in 4 broke away in the last couple of rolls, and McLean went into the lead. Thomson pulled his brassie to the hills at the tenth, but got a half in 5, and he was lucky at the eleventh when McLean narrowly failed to hole for a 2. McLean had a bad lie for his second to the twelfth and pulled into the bunker at the greenside, but Thomson, after playing the hole perfectly, then missed a putt for the win of about a yard and a half. To the thirteenth McLean played a heavy second and was short with his pitch, but he ran down a long one for a half in 4.

A WELL-PLAYED HOLE

Calamity corner (the fourteenth) will probably never be played in a championship as both played it now. McLean was about five yards to the left of the flag, but Thomson played even a better shot, being about four yards to the right. Thomson holed his putt for a 2, but so did the other! A magnificently played hole. The fifteenth was halved in 5's. The luck was again against the holder at the sixteenth, where, after a pulled drive, he was short with his second. McLean got well on with wood, but he took three putts. He, however, laid a dead stymie, and for the first time a 6 was recorded. Both were bunkered off their seconds to the seventeenth, but McLean played the hole indifferently for a 6 and Thomson, after taking his bunker shot too cleanly, got a 5 for the hole, the challenger being one more. McLean snatched a 4 and a half at the home hole, and they went to lunch with McLean leading by one hole.

A STYMIE LOFTED

The second round opened with Thomson brilliantly lofting a dead stymie at the first for a half in 4, and, having squared at the third with a magnificent 3, he took the lead at the fourth, where McLean was rather slack with his approach and also with his approach putt.

THE TURNING POINT

The match proceeded on even lines with the figures excellent in the high cross wind, but at the sixth there came a change. Both were too strong with their seconds. McLean had a chance of a half from four feet, but he let it slip, and was 2 down. The seventh was also won by Thomson, McLean being in a sandy lie from the tee shot, and having to play a niblick. McLean simply collapsed at this point, and, losing the eighth and ninth, turned 5 down. It was an amazing turn in the holder's favour, but he played superb golf for an outward half of 34, or four under the scratch score. McLean fought on gallantly, but the best he could do was to win the short eleventh in a 4. Thomson finished off the challenger at Calamity Corner (the fourteenth), which he halved, although he was in the big hollow on the right with the other ball on the green. Result:—

Hector Thomson (Williamwood) (holder) beat John McLean (Hayston) by 5 and 4.

GAELIC GAMES

HURLING TEST AT PARNELL PARK

THREE ALL-IRELAND SEMI-FINALS

(BY PAT'O.)

To-morrow's programme at Parnell Park brings the League leaders, Army and Faughs, into opposition. Faughs tried some new men last Sunday against Civil Service, but they did not please me well enough to suggest that they can defeat Army, who may possibly be the best club side in current hurling. Still, it should be a good game, and will give a line to U.C.D., who are re-forming after the summer recess. They meet Army in the last game of the League within a week or two.

Armagh and Sligo meet in the All-Ireland junior football semi-final at Cavan. Sligo sprang a surprise when beating a smart Mayo side, but in Armagh they will meet a team who play skilful football, and the Western men will have all their work cut out. Galway should qualify against Antrim at Belfast to meet Limerick in the junior hurling final.

Louth and Mayo minors replay their drawn semi-final tie at Ballina.

FIXTURES

CAVAN—Armagh v. Sligo (Junior Football Semi-final).

BELFAST—Galway v. Antrim (Junior Hurling Semi-final).

BALLINA—Louth v. Mayo (Minor Football re-play).

PARNELL PARK—Army Metro v. Faughs (hurling), 12.0; Garda v. Parnells (football), 1.15; Kincora v. Vincents, 2.30.

CLONDALKIN—Army Metro v. Naas (football), 2.0; O'Tooles v. Kickhams (football), 3.30.

GUINNESS'S S.C. GALA

DISAPPOINTING WATER POLO TRIAL

The sixth annual gala of the Guinness S.C. at the Iveagh Baths last night was attended by a large crowd.

The inter-provincial water polo trial was robbed of much of its value by the deflection of most of the backs of both teams. A poor game, in which the forwards on each side were superior to the backs, resulted in a win for the Blues by the odd goal of thirteen, the frequent scoring being the only feature of the match.

Sir John Lumsden presented the prizes. Details:—

66 Yards Breast Stroke (A.U.)—M. Ronan, 1; M. Kiersey, 2; J. Walsh, 3. Four competed. Time —57 secs.

44 Yards Boys' Handicap (Club)—J. Dwyer (3), 1; A. Richardson (10), 2; W. Richardson (8), 3. Six competed. Time—36 secs.

Men's 66 Yards Open Handicap—Final—C. J. O'Neill, Dublin University (8), 1; A. McDonald, Sandycove (7), 2; W. O. Nolan, Pembroke (7), 3. Won by a yard; a touch. Thirty-eight competed. Time—44 secs.

PADGHAM BEATS ALLISS IN GREAT FINAL

One of the most thrilling finals of post-war days was witnessed on the Royal Mid-Surrey course, Richmond, yesterday, when Alfred Padgham, of Sundridge Park, Kent, defeated Percy Alliss, of Beaconsfield, Bucks., by 3 up and 2 to play in the £1,250 News of the World Tournament. Padgham's prize was £300 and a gold medal, and the award to Alliss was £100 and a gold medal. Padgham won the tournament in 1931, and Alliss was successful two years later.

"The finest match I ever played," said Padgham to a reporter. "I knew at the end of the first round that I had to produce something out of the ordinary. I did it."

Alliss, the good sportsman that he is, said: "I do not mind being beaten by a good golfer. Alfred deserved to win."

In a match of fluctuating fortune, Padgham held on grimly to an opponent who, in the early stages of the game, played perfect golf. Twice Alliss established a three holes' lead, and twice Padgham got back a hole when the Beaconsfield man threatened to run away with the match. Padgham even improved upon this, for at the eighteenth he won another hole, and so ended the round only 1 down. The mental tonic of his improved position must have been considerable when he went to lunch. Alliss must have been shaken by a serious lapse at the fourteenth in the first round, when his previously excellent putting broke down and he took a six after missing from two feet.

But the real turning point in the game came at the first hole in the afternoon. The hole measures 340 yards, and for the first time in the tournament Padgham drove through the green It was a magnificent effort, and it brought its reward. Padgham sent his pitch close to the pin, and holed his putt for a "birdie" 3 and a win. Then came his great thrust. He had at long last drawn level, and his confidence was restored. Alliss was obviously shaken, for at the next hole he allowed Padgham to take the lead for the first time in the match. Indeed, he did not win another hole until the thirty-first, when the match was virtually won and lost.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

DUBLIN DULL

GUINNESS AGAIN LOWER

TRAMS WEAK

In small markets local descriptions were on the dull side on the Dublin Stock Exchange yesterday, but big Industrials held up well, and in the afternoon a more cheerful atmosphere prevailed on rumours that France would support the League of Nations.

Among Free State Funds, Land Bonds showed an easier trend. War Loan in the later dealings came in buyers, and closed 13s. 9d. higher on the day.

Bank of Ireland Stock gave way, but Nationals hardened a shade, and Provincial Old improved.

Guinness units, on fresh selling, lost several pence. Home Rails also eased slightly.

Dublin Tram Ord. and Pref. both lost 5s. on a little liquidation.

Todd Burns Pref. gained 7s. 6d., and Carroll Crd. rose 1s.

There was little interest in British Industrials, but B.A.T. Ord. recovered to 114s. 6d.

LONDON BRIGHTER

SHARP RECOVERY IN GILT-EDGED

The French Premier's speech concerning the policy of France in the Abyssinian dispute was responsible for a marked improvement in the conditions on the London Stock Markets yesterday. Sentiment in most departments was distinctly more cheerful, and although the volume of business left much to be desired, prices quickly responded to a renewal of support, and at the close nearly all prices were higher, with gains in Gilt-edged outstanding.

There was little doing in Gilt-edged Stocks in early dealings, but the market staged an all-round recovery during the afternoon and closed strong. Old Consols showed a rise of ⅞ at 83¾, and Local Loans were ¾ higher at 93¾, while War Loan and a number of others advanced. Trading in Foreign Bonds was small, and, apart from an all-round improvement in Brazilians, which continue in request, values were not greatly altered.

The British Rail group was stimulated to a small extent by the pronouncement that rebate rates for transport of coal from Midland fields to Hull are to be reconsidered at the end of next month. L.M.S. Ord. and L.N.E. Prefd. strengthened, but Southerns were on the dull side. During the early part of the session there was some demand for a few Foreign Rails, chiefly Argentine issues, and quotations improved. Support was not sustained, however, and prices receded, but B.A. and Western and Cordoba Central Debs. were firm exceptions. The recent activity in American Rails abated, and in the absence of interest prices were inclined to give way.

The Industrial market was again suffering from a shortage of buyers, but the tone was firmer, and numerous advances occurred. A good deal of bargain-hunting following the recent fall was noticeable in the Iron and Steel section, with John Brown and United Steel attracting most attention, while certain Rayon descriptions showed to advantage. Motor and Aircraft shares were rather subdued, and, after moving narrowly, closed without important change. In other directions trans-Atlantics continued active, and several of the leaders were assisted by Amsterdam buying. On the other hand, Brewery issues were offered and closed dull.

The Mining groups, in common with other markets, aided by more encouraging advices from the Cape, rallied, and several substantial gains were recorded. West Africans also presented a better appearance, a recovery in Kwahu showing up well. Other Gold shares were not greatly changed. Among base metals, Coppers were inclined to firmness, but Tins were hardly affected by a further advance in the metal prices. The Oil share market started in quiet fashion, but improved as the session progressed. Attock continued to be favourably affected by development news, and several others advanced. A sharp rise in Royal Dutch was due to Continental buying.

THE INDUSTRIAL MARKET

A FIRMER TENDENCY

After a dull opening yesterday the Industrial market became steadier during the afternoon and finished quietly firm. The news from Geneva was regarded in a more favourable light, and this caused a certain amount of "bear" covering, and, with a few bargain-hunters about, prices generally improved.

The trans-Atlantic counters showed some hesitation at the start, but prices improved in the late dealings and closed fairly firm. "Emmies" moved irregularly. Cable and Wireless stocks showed no decided trend.

Among Cinema issues, Gaumont-British responded to the increased profits.

Aviation and kindred descriptions commanded only a moderate amount of attention. Rolls-Royce came into renewed demand and recovered to 7 11/16, and Hawker hardened, but Napiers receded.

A strong feature among Motor shares was provided by Austins. In response to a good demand the shares advanced to 53s. 6d.

ELECTRICALS IMPROVED.

The decline which took place in the earlier days of the week attracted buyers to Electric Supply shares, with the result that values were mostly higher. Electrical Equipments also presented a firm appearance.

A fair amount of interest was displayed in Iron and Steel descriptions, but price changes showed no decided tendency.

In the Coal group, Wm. Cory were a better market, and Powell Duffryn improved.

Breweries presented a steadier front in the absence of further sales, and here and there prices were inclined to improve.

In the Alcohol section, South African Wines and Booths found supporters.

TOBACCOS FIRMER.

The Tobacco leaders had a firmer appearance. "Bats" and Gallahers were both 1/16 better, while Godfrey Phillips hardened.

The Stores group received quiet support. Harrods recovered to 79s. 6d., and one or two others hardened.

Apart from buying of the Unilever issues, the Provision and Catering section had a dull appearance. Unilever Ord. gained 6d. and the N.V. 9d.

Textiles moved within narrow limits, and Rayons made an irregular showing.

Bank shares remained on the quiet side, with Standard of South Africa a firm spot at 14 1/16.

Insurance issues were somewhat firmer.

Shipping descriptions seemed rather irregular in their movements.

Among Land shares, Sudans gained the turn.

British Oxygens provided a bright spot in a rather irregular Miscellaneous section, closing 1/16 higher. Imperial Chemicals issues encountered moderate support, as did Turner and Newalls. Cement issues had a steadier appearance. Triplex Glass lost ground, but Dunlops rallied, and United Molasses put on a few pence. Herrburger Brooks were in demand on the annual results and distribution. British Aluminium and Qualcast were also firm markets.

OIL MARKET FIRMER

At the outset the dulness which had characterised the Oil shares market in the earlier days of the week continued in evidence. No real market existed in many shares, and price changes were merely the result of sentiment. Consequently reports of more hopeful news from Geneva were quickly reflected in quotations. The improvement in sentiment led to repurchase by "bears," which, coupled with the receipt of buyers' orders from the Continent, brought about a general recovery. Taken as a whole the market finished with a much brighter appearance than for some days. Following the news of the success achieved in the deep test well at Dhullian, Attock were again in strong demand.

RUBBERS SUBDUED

The better tendency which developed yesterday in most other departments failed to stimulate the Rubber share market, which was unfavourably affected by a further decline in the commodity price. Interest was practically negligible, and with a little selling in progress values dropped back. Pataling lost 1s. 3d., while United Sua Betong and Telegoredjo were lower by 7½d. Other changes, however, were of little consequence. Unsettled conditions developed in the commodity section, and spot rubber sold down to 5 7/16d. per lb. United Kingdom stocks of rubber are estimated to have increased by 900 tons during the past week.

LONDON MINING MARKET

GOLD SHARES HARDEN

Mining shares gave a decidedly better account of themselves yesterday, and, although the change for the better was mainly a matter of sentiment, quotations practically all round were on the up-grade. There were no sensational movements in "Kaffirs," the jump in West Wits being exceptional, but the Cape was inclined to support its favourites. West Wits and West Rand were prominent, though, as regards the former, no news was forthcoming to account for the rise, the latter were being bought for investment.

Practically the whole active list advanced, and the tone at the close was much more cheerful than on any day since Monday last. Rhodesians shared in the better tone generally prevailing.

The Copper issues were also harder inclined on the rise in the metal price.

De Beers, in the Diamond list, presented a better appearance. Jungles felt the effect of the change of sentiment, and, although there was no increase in the volume of trading, prices here and there were distinctly harder. Australians, however, generally remained quiet.

A little attention was given to Tin descriptions, partly on the improvement in the metal price. Elsewhere San Francisco, on a wider appreciation of the possibilities, were inquired for, and rallied sharply, and the base metal descriptions were well maintained. Closing prices:—

FINANCIAL PARAGRAPHS

Bank of France Gold Reserve

The Bank of France balance sheet for the week ended 6th September shows an increase in gold reserve of Frs.315,000,000 (£4,200,000 at current rates), as compared with an increase of Frs.133,000,000 (£1,773,000) a week ago. The total gold reserve now amounts to Frs.72,056,933,669 (£960,759,115). There is a falling-off in the commercial bill-case from Frs.7,578,000,000 (£101,000,000) a week ago to Frs.6,888,000,000 (£92,000,000) this week. There is also a fall of Frs.247,000,000 (£3,300,000) in the note circulation, which now stands at Frs.81,993,635,440 (£1,093,248,472) Owing to the decrease of about Frs.549,000,000 (£7,320,000) in the Bank's engagements at sight and the increase in the gold reserve, the Bank's proportion of gold cover to commitments at sight has increased from 74.61 per cent. to 75.37.

French West Africa Goldfield

Methodical development of the goldfields in French West Africa is foreshadowed in an announcement by the Ministry for the Colonies. A vast gold-prospecting programme is to be carried out this year in French West Africa. If the results warrant it, machinery, which will become available when the Niger irrigation works are completed, will be installed. A much wider development will be undertaken if the experiment proves a success.

Phosferine (Ashton and Parsons)

A declaration of solvency was filed on September 7 relating to Phosferine (Ashton and Parsons), Ltd., which was registered in 1928. No mortgages or charges have been registered. The directors are Sir Herbert J. F. Parsons, Bart.; Harold E. S. Parsons, George W. Caton, Francis H. C. Tallach, John A. Kenningham and Herbert J. F. Parsons. An agreement has been approved for the sale of the undertaking of the company to the Veno Drug Company for £480,000 cash and interest thereon from May 1, 1935, at 7 per cent. per annum, and also a contribution of £1,000 towards the costs of sale. This will be sufficient to repay the £400,000 of 8 per cent. Cumulative Participating Ordinary £1 shares, and 4s. per share on the 400,000 5s. Deferred shares. A meeting of the shareholders will be held to place the company in voluntary liquidation.

Trowbridge Tyre

Various plans are under discussion regarding the future of the Trowbridge Tyre and Rubber Company. One idea is that an existing company shall take over the present concern. Another plan provides for the formation of a new company to take over the assets. Shareholders' views are to be ascertained. A petition for the winding-up of the company has been filed, and will be heard on 14th October. The company was formed in 1929 to acquire a business registered the previous year. The issued capital is £160,175 in 5s. shares, quoted at 3d.-1s.

Coast Lines Shares

It is understood that arrangements for the sale of the Ordinary shares of Coast Lines to an important financial syndicate have now practically been concluded. The shares are stated to have been sold at less than £1 each, which is their par value, but the final details have not yet been agreed. Coast Lines, which is controlled jointly by the R.M. Realisation Company and H. and W. Nelson, conducts passenger and cargo services between the principal ports of the United Kingdom. The issue and paid-up capital totals £4,625,000, of which £2,000,000 is in £1 Ordinary shares, £750,000 in 6½ per cent. £1 Preference and £1,875,000 in 6 per cent. £1 Preference. Outstanding loan capital stands at £2,500,000 in 5 per cent. First Debenture stock quoted at 103½. Sir Alfred H. Read is the chairman. The company has paid off arrears of dividend on its Preference shares. Among other companies, Coast Lines, Ltd., controls the Belfast Steamship Co., Ltd.; the Burns and Laird Lines, Ltd.; British and Irish Steam Packet Co., and the City of Cork Steam Packet Co., Ltd. Sir Alfred Read is the chairman and managing director.

Synthetic Rubber

Not much importance is attached to the recent announcement by Herr Hitler that Germany will soon be producing artificial rubber. According to a prominent Mincing Lane broker, the cost of the synthetic product is around 5s. per lb. as compared with about 5½d. for the real article, though it is to be expected that in time the cost will be reduced. According to the authority mentioned, the material to be produced by Germany is apparently of the same degree of usefulness as reclaimed rubber which America developed on a considerable scale some years ago. This article would be useful with rubber quoted at a very high price, but obviously there can be no question of competition with the ordinary product under present conditions.

Scottish Power

The directors have decided to offer as rights to the Ordinary shareholders on the register on September 7, 1935, one Ordinary share for every six Ordinary shares held at the price of 32s. per share. This will involve the issue of 538,333 new shares.

THE MONEY MARKET

FALL IN TREASURY BILL RATE

Tenders were received at the Bank of England yesterday for £45,000,000 Treasury bills. Tenders dated Monday to Saturday of next week at £99 17s. 4d. receive about 81 per cent., above in full. The average rate indicated is about 10s. 6d. per cent., compared with 12s. 4.34d. per cent. for last week's bills.

Conditions were unchanged in Lombard street yesterday, where short loans were in quiet demand at ½ per cent. Fine three months' bills were steady at 9/16 to ⅝ per cent.

The price of gold was fixed ½d. lower at 140s. 10½d. per fine ounce, including a prem. of ½d. over the dollar at 4.93⅞, and 7½d. over the franc at 74 15/16. About £155,000 was available in the market.

The Bank of England announced the purchase of £75,382 in bar gold.

Silver rose 1/16d. for spot to 29 7/16d. per ounce, and ½d. for forward delivery to 29⅜d. per ounce, on Eastern buying.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE.

A renewal of selling pressure on the Dutch guilder, after a respite lasting some months, formed the feature of the London Foreign Exchange market yesterday. Guilder sales from various Continental centres forced the currency well beyond gold export point to Paris, widespread fears for the fate of the Dutch Economy Bill, when Parliament re-assembles in the near future, being current. The currency was also under considerable pressure in the forward market, and discounts were increased sharply. Most of the other European gold currencies moved in step with the American dollar, the dollar-franc exchange remaining almost stationary in the neighbourhood of gold point to New York throughout. The tendency was rather less favourable to London in the early hours, but New York turned the tables later with moderate sales of dollars, as a result of which the pound moved to higher levels in relation to all the principal currencies.

DUBLIN DISTRICT COURT

CONSPIRACY CHARGE

(BEFORE MR. HANNAN.)

Philip Barron, Buckingham Buildings, was charged with having conspired with two other men, not in custody, to rob George Farley, Relieving Officer, of £200. He was also charged with having been in possession of a revolver without licence and with intent to endanger life.

Detective-Sergeant Dodd stated that, in company with Sergeant Molloy, he visited the residence of the prisoner and told him that they were inquiring about the attempted robbery of Mr. Farley, and that he answered to the description given them of one of the men who were wanted. The defendant said that he knew nothing about it. He was taken into custody and was placed on identification parade at Lad Lane Station, where he was identified by a witness. When the charge was read over to him he said: "I was at home at the time of the crime."

The defendant was remanded on bail, himself in £200 and two sureties in £200 each.

THEFT OF BICYCLE

James Gilchrist (16½), Lower Dominick street, was charged with the larceny of a bicycle, value £8 10s., the property of Michael McGonigal, Upper Clanbrassil street. He was also charged with breaking and entering a lock-up factory in North Lotts, the property of Max Darblour, Rathgar road, and stealing a cape value 8s. 10d. from the premises.

Detective-Officer McShane stated that he saw the boy wheeling a bicycle over Butt Bridge. When he was questioned he said that the bicycle was the property of a Mr. Turner, his employer, and that he was about to return it.

Mr. McGonigal, having told how he left the bicycle outside a bookmaker's office, and found it gone when he came out, the boy was remanded in custody until next Friday.

ASSAULT ON GUARD

"ANIMAL GANG" MENTIONED

Peter McAuley (23), of 5 Summerhill; Michael Nolan, 111 Lower Gardiner street; Thomas McMahon, 20 Summerhill; James O'Toole, 7 Lower Jane place, and Henry Walsh, 31 Hanover street, were charged on remand with having assaulted Guard Mulligan in Talbot street and inflicting serious personal injury upon him by striking him with an iron bar. McAuley was charged with assaulting the Guard and with having used abusive language and being guilty of conduct likely to lead to a breach of the peace. The other men were charged with common assault.

Mr. D. O'Donovan (Chief State Solicitor's office) prosecuted. Mr. P. Campbell appeared for Nolan and McAuley, and Mr. P. V. Murtagh for O'Toole.

McMahon, in evidence, swore that, with his wife, he was at the pictures at the time of the occurrence in question.

O'Toole said that he was only a looker-on at the row in which the Guard was assaulted.

Guard Mulligan, who still had the mark of the assault on his forehead, said that O'Toole was one of the most active in the crowd.

Mr. O'Donovan asked that all the accused men be bound to the peace for two years. Protection should be given to the Guards against persons like the defendants. One of them—Mr. McAuley—was a leader of the "Animal Gang," and had already served a sentence of imprisonment. There was another of the defendants who had some connection with the "gang."

Mr. Campbell said that it was not fair to make statements that had not been proved.

Peter McAuley was sentenced to six months' hard labour for the assault on Guard Mulligan. The four others were bound to the peace for two years.

CONVERSION CHARGE

Michael T. Maher, Harcourt terrace, Adelaide road, Dublin, was charged with the fraudulent conversion of £13 9s. 6d., the property of Miss C. McCarthy, Wilfield road, Sandymount, that sum being the quarterly instalment of the repayment of £600 loan that was obtained from the Royal Liver Society by Miss McCarthy.

Maher, it was stated, was, until four months ago, an agent for the Royal Liver Society. It was his duty to surrender all moneys collected by him on Thursday of each week at the office in Dun Laoghaire.

The defendant, who was represented by Mr. J. F. Kent, denied that he was guilty of the offence.

Inspector Weir and Detective Sergeant Reynold had charge of the case. Mr. D. O'Donovan (Chief State Solicitor's Office) prosecuted.

The case was adjourned until next Friday, and the defendant was admitted to bail.

HOLD-UP AT DUBLIN PORT

QUESTION OF TRADE UNION CARDS

Delegates from the Irish Seamen's and Port Workers' Union were in attendance at the City Quay, Dublin, yesterday, and in accordance with their instructions upwards of sixty carriers' vehicles were prevented from loading cargo discharged from the s.s. Winga.

An official of the Union stated that this action had been taken because of the fact that the staffs of these carriers could not produce trade union cards.

The bulk of the cargo was removed during the day by trade union workers.

It is understood that the majority of the lorries which were held up were from outside the city area.
